Doctoral Advisory Committee – A minimum of three members. The chair must have full graduate faculty status and be a faculty member in the student’s department. The remaining members must have either associate or full graduate faculty status. An associate graduate faculty member may serve as a co-chair.

- One member must be from outside the student’s department.
- All doctoral committee members must attend both the course prescription meeting and the oral qualifying examination.

The Advisory Committee members serve through the completion of the qualifying examination. After the student is admitted to candidacy, a Research Committee is created to supervise the dissertation research. Advisory Committee members may serve on the Research Committee, and appointments are made using the Nomination of Research Committee for the Ph.D. form.
