This year’s ALC/CAMP spring meeting was hosted by Northwestern University as part of a series of events to mark the 50th anniversary of the Melville J. Herskovits Library. One of the meeting’s highlights was the launch of a festschrift to honor late Africana librarian Dan Britz from Northwestern University: Victoria Evalds and David Henige, eds., Africanist Librarianship in an Era of Change.

Please look for minutes of the ALC Cataloging Committee in this issue, and other minutes in issue no. 118.

Africana Librarians Council Minutes

ALC Cataloging Committee Meeting
Northwestern University, Norris University Center, Michigan Room Friday, May 6, 2005: 9:45-10:45 am Minutes (draft of May 27, 2005)

Present: Ruby Bell-Gam (UCLA), Atoma Batoma (U. of Illinois), Phyllis Bischof (UC Berkeley), Ellen Bryan (U. of Chicago), Joe Caruso (Columbia), Jill Coelho (Harvard, Widener), Greg Finnegan (Harvard), Karen Fung (Stanford), Miki Goral (UCLA), Marieta Harper (LC), Bassey Irele (Harvard), Al Kagan (U. of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign), Patricia Kuntz, Joe Lauer (Michigan State, ALC Cataloging Committee chair), Bob Lesh (Northwestern), Peter Limb (Michigan State), Peter Malanchuk (U. of Florida), Giles Martin (OCLC), Karen Miller (Northwestern), Lauris Olson (U. of Pennsylvania), Laverne Page (LC), Edward Miner (U. of Iowa), Arieforku Paulus (U. of Michigan), Loumona Petroff (Boston U.), Dan Rebourssin (U. of Florida), Andrea Stamm (Northwestern), Shoshanah Seidman (Northwestern), Gretchen Walsh (Boston U.), David Westley (Boston U.), Milicent Wewerka (LC), Dorothy Woodson (Yale).

1 & 2. Introductions were made and the minutes of the fall meeting were approved.

3. Africana Subject Funnel report (Lauer).
The Report was distributed and will be posted on the ALC website. There were contributions from many people and all of the submissions were thoroughly researched. Many new or revised headings are submitted directly to SACO from both ALC and non-ALC members.

Lauer mentioned that the proposed change from "Chapbooks, Nigerian" to "Nigerian market literature" was rejected, but new x-refs for "Onitsha market literature" and "Nigerian market literature" were added. Westley asked if Chapbooks, Hausa would be a permissible subject heading. Limb brought up Khoikhoi (African people), which is now sometimes spelled with an "e" as an example where LCSH has not kept up with current practice.

4. Issues with classification schedules:
   a. Lauer reported that Margaret Hughes (Stanford University) has submitted a number of classification proposals over the past year. She expressed some concern about the length of time these took [and was told that proposals not listed within 4 months should be resubmitted].
   b. Hughes also wanted to see a list of proposals being considered or in process, similar to the list of subject proposals available online. No one seconded this idea.
   c. Lauer raised the possibility of revising the headings in the PL8000s and proposed preparing a draft. Limb cited Hottentot and German East Africa as highly outdated forms. LC practice for the classification schedules has been retain the old form and add an x-ref so as not to alter the alphabetical order, which necessitates much additional work.

5. Future directions.
   a. Margaret Hughes (absent) asked if the amplification of the LC classification for the Indian Ocean islands, which currently are all represented by a single LC classification number, is still a priority. The current problem is to coordinate the time periods for the LC schedules and LCSH, and nothing new has been done. Given the amount of work already done on this project, the Committee felt it should be completed. Caruso volunteered to contact Hughes to help.
   b. Need for more chronological divisions in LCSH: Several noted that there are more chronological divisions in the classification schedules than in LCSH. Countries mentioned as needing more historical divisions were Ghana and Zimbabwe. Some thought we should ask LC to make this a priority, but LC simply does not have the staff to initiate these changes.
   c. Walsh noted that users rely on keywords rather than subject headings. Someone suggested that librarians should ask authors and publishers to furnish sufficient keywords in titles to facilitate keyword searching.

5 Reports and announcements.
   a. Library of Congress (Wewerka):
      LC is reasonably current in cataloging of Africana materials in political science and history. Some backlog is accumulating in ethnology. There is a backlog in language and literature because no one is currently cataloging this material.
      Dictionaries from the backlog were cleared out with a special project. No one can do descriptive cataloging in the vernacular materials. Cataloging of Amharic and Tigrinya materials from the Thomas Kane collection is being done as a special project.
      Cataloging issues: LC relies on the summaries from the Nairobi office for cataloging of Swahili and African-language materials. Catalogers noted the lack of (or unfamiliarity with) online reference sources other than Ethnologue, and would welcome recommendations of other sources.
      Nature of material: Relatively little material is received on the colonial era. There seems to be a project in Germany to publish archival materials from German settlements (diaries, etc.).
      New development, etc.: The PJ-PK and PL-PM schedules are being edited for new editions.
   b. CC:AAM (Lesh) [see Appendix A]
   c. Northwestern report [see Appendix A]
      Olson raised the issue of hidden collection, which is a concern of many libraries.

6. Ongoing cataloging issues
   a. Are more analytics needed?
      Limb said a few words about analytics. This is a difficult issue in many libraries. Some libraries exclude analytics (Harvard) and others do make them available.
   b. Experience cataloging free-on-web materials
Caruso is involved in a Title VI digital project on Senegambia materials, which will be available online and free to the public. He would like to have these records included in other institutional catalogs. More information on this will be sent out on the Africana list.

The meeting was adjourned.

APPENDIX A
CC:AAM report (Winter 2005: Boston)
by Robert Lesh
(April 25, 2005)

CC:AAM (Committee on Cataloging: Asian and African Materials) met during the American Library Association's annual meeting on Sunday January 16, 2005, at 1:00 P.M. This is a new meeting time, and CC:AAM will meet at this time in the future.

Since the previous meeting, the program evaluation summary was emailed to members. This evaluation consisted of a survey of those who attended the CC:AAM-sponsored program on Unicode, which took place at the summer meeting in Orlando on June 26, 2004. LC's response to CC:AAM's comments on the revision of the Chinese Romanization guidelines was also received. The text of both is included in the appendices of the minutes.

CC:AAM is undergoing a committee charge review. Part of this review involves a change in the organization of CC:AAM. The Cataloging and Classification Section has already reviewed and approved some changes. The size of the Committee will be reduced to seven voting members from a previous size of nine. The Japanese specialist will be removed from the Committee since that area should be covered by the East Asian specialist. As before, the specialists will be required to report cataloging activities of the area studies community to CC:AAM, and they will be expected to attend their respective area studies associations' meetings. There will be an addition of a Committee intern as a non-voting member. The intern will be assigned the task of taking notes on the meeting to aid in preparing the minutes.

Taking up the ALC recommendation to implement the Universal Character Set (UCS) on an accelerated basis, CC:AAM passed a resolution to that effect at the previous meeting and forwarded it on to MARBI. Initial reaction from MARBI was that this resolution was redundant since MARBI (Machine-Readable Bibliographic Information Committee) had long ago decided to include UCS. However, the recommendation was passed on to AVIAC (Automation Vendor Interface Advisory Committee) and NISO (National Information Standards Organization (U.S.)). CC:AAM will take two further actions. Jade Atwill will coordinate with specialists to compile a need-based prioritized list of non-roman language scripts. David Nelson will conduct a literature review and develop a questionnaire that will be sent to vendors to find out the status of Unicode UCS implementation. Based on the findings of the questionnaire, the Committee will determine what should be the next course of action to advocate!

DDC (Dewey Decimal Classification) is still awaiting feedback from the National Library of Indonesia on their proposal for the Indonesian provinces. DDC is trying to find a more appropriate contact at National Library of Indonesia to expedite this process.

The development of Islamic law subject headings is moving very slowly. Most libraries have not yet started to use these new subject headings, and those that have report that it is inadequate. Experts in the field have started to propose subject headings in a more structured way. The task force in charge of the new subject headings is planning to make other contacts to see how the development of Romanization tables for Central Asia can be expedited.

The Committee will alert the cataloging community in the five regions it represents to encourage catalogers to participate in the review process of the draft of AACR3. Any comments may be sent to Committee member Keiko Suzuki (<mailto:keiko.suzuki@yale.edu>), who is coordinating CC:AAM's comments on AACR3 (Anglo-American Cataloging Rules 3) with CC:DA (Committee on Cataloging: Description and Analysis). The draft of AACR3 is not for general distribution, and any ALC members who would like to have more information on the AACR3 draft are encouraged to contact their ALC/CC:AAM representative.

Suzuki will work with John Eilts to include any comments in the document that he will be preparing to CC:AAM to forward to CC:CA.

It was agreed that CC:AAM will sponsor a program on "Promoting PCC participation in the Area Studies Community", which would take place at the summer 2006 ALA meeting. The Committee would like to co-sponsor this program with PCC (Program for Cooperative Cataloging) as a silent partner. The program will be a discussion forum where existing PCC participants will share their experiences and answer questions from the audience. The target audience will include area studies catalogers, other catalogers, librarians and administrators.

Due to lack of time, CC:AAM did not discuss the "ALA Ahead to 2010" plan. The chair will collect written comments from members and forward them to ALA. Written reports form the area studies groups, RLG, LC, and OCLC were accepted and are available in the appendices of the minutes.

APPENDIX B

We have now completed two-thirds of our fiscal year. During this time, Northwestern staff cataloged 4,432 titles in 4,777 volumes for the Africana collection. Unfortunately, the Africana monographic backlog increased to 14,972 volumes (a 7.8% increase). We do hope to stop this growth trend in the coming summer months, but that depends on other general collections that we expect to receive shortly.

Africana cataloging staffing remains at the same level as the previous fiscal year. Bob Lesh (cataloging ¾ time) and Shoshanah Seidman continue to be very productive catalogers, as is Karen Miller, an original cataloger who is completing her second year on a term position. Northwestern is most proud of its efforts in the digital arena. I hope you all had the opportunity to attend yesterday's presentation on NU digital projects, where you heard about our recent efforts to catalog Africana posters (<http://www.library.northwestern.edu/africana/collections/posters>) and our implementation of the EAD (Encoded Archival Description) for the papers of Dr. Abdullah Abdurahman as well as the Winterton collection of East African photographs. We also began a digital project where we will catalog some 130 rare maps of Africa.

Another high priority project we recently began involves making sure Northwestern's holdings are accurately reflected in OCLC. Catalogers are adding our holdings to OCLC bibliographic records and creating original bibliographic records in OCLC when there is no match of holdings already in OCLC. Africana accounts for a large proportion of our original records in OCLC. Much of the work is being performed by sophisticated programs, but human review is necessary for 60,000 titles. Thus far, we have completed approximately 28% of the project. We expect to continue for another 18 months or so.

The Africana conference paper indexing project produced 3,591 additional individual papers in 136 new Africana conference proceedings. Total figures in our separate Africana conference paper file are now: 108,763 individual papers in 6,056 conference proceedings.

Catalogers continue to process some of our "hidden collections". This fiscal year, for printed Africana monographs, we continued to catalog the Africana textbook collection. The Library now subscribes to a table of contents (TOC) enrichment service. When a match occurs, Blackwell North America inserts the table of contents into the bibliographic record in a 505 field. The TOC is thus keyword searchable in Voyager. 6,600 bibliographic records were enriched, out of 17,606 sent (a 38% hit rate) this year. The specific hit rate of Africana titles is not known.

Respectfully submitted by Andrea Stamm.

RSS - News feeds and African Studies

By Lauris Olson

Our area-studies librarians have been designing collection-level web pages and, as we’d been exposed to presentations on weblogs and news feeds, we decided to make these pages lively. Our web designer created for our pages a modified portal template that included news feed portlets as a sidebar. Our challenge has been to find informative and relatively active news feeds to fill these portlets. Our experiences in learning about feeds, identifying suitable ones, and deploying them on computer desktops and web pages might be helpful to colleagues whose libraries are developing similar capabilities.

1. The concept.

You have a sequence of web documents you want to offer up for web syndication, that is, to offer to other web sites. Using the appropriate XML tag set for web syndication, you build a list – a channel – of these documents, with tags for each document’s title and URL, with a brief description. This list becomes your news feed.

I find the URL for your news feed and copy it into the location list of my web browser’s plug-in news feed reader, or I use the feed reader software installed on our library’s web server to embed the URL in a web page, perhaps a portlet – a defined space on a web portal page – or a research guide. Now, my web page will display the most current version of your document list. [Link-chasing in the Wikipedia gives a good overview of web syndication, RSS and other feed formats, and related topics.]

2. Selecting appropriate news feeds.

The best news feeds have coherent content, update frequently, and look good in a list format. The most active feeds are, of course, from the news media. Strong feeds covering Africa are:

-- BBC News | Africa | World Edition
http://newsrss.bbc.co.uk/rss/newsonline_world_edition/africa/rss.xml

-- AllAfrica News: Latest
http://allafrica.com/tools/headlines/rdf/latest/headlines.rdf

-- Moreover Technologies - Africa news

Although you may find other news media feeds – CNN, Reuters, IPS – worth reading, it’s a good idea to monitor them for volume, currency, relevance, and geographic precision over time before republishing them for your users.

The World Health Organization’s WHO News and Disease Outbreaks news feeds, both global in coverage, are rare IGO feeds:
http://www.who.int/about/licensing/rss/en/.

The International Labour Organization’s press release feed also covers all nations. The UN Pulse blog, produced by the Dag Hammarskjold Library, can be viewed in a news feed reader for announcements of new UN online information: http://unhq-appspub-01.un.org/lib/dhhrefweblog.nsf

For Africa, the UN IRIN Africa Service news feed gives global coverage of refugee events:
http://www.irinnews.org/Africa.xml

The ILO

Many NGOs offer feeds: Human Rights Watch and International Crisis Group offer strong African coverage in the global feeds promoting their recently published reports.

Announcement news feeds are particularly attractive. Alcasalist readers have pointed out these local announcement feeds:
-- African Studies Centre (Leiden) calendar and news items
http://www.ascleiden.nl/RssFeeds/ChannelVersion1.xml

-- UCLA African Studies Center
http://www.international.ucla.edu/africa/rss.asp

H-Net’s recent announcement feeds are defined by function – conference, grant, and so on – rather than by discipline, making them less attractive for regional specialists.

News feeds built from discussion log or listerv submissions permit you to keep current in monitoring correspondence without clogging your e-mail inbox. Weblogs, too, can be monitored through feeds. H-Net offers a reference page for its recent discussion log, job posting, announcement, and book review feeds: http://www.h-net.org/about/rss.php.

Discussion logs that generate busy threads may look odd as feeds: today’s H-Africa feed consists almost entirely of the repeated title, “Usage of ‘tribe,’ ‘clan,’ and ‘nation.’”

New book announcements and journal tables of contents are popular news feeds for promoting library services. E-journal publishers use feeds: Oxford University Press and IngentaConnect (distributing Blackwell, Brill, Carfax, Oxford UP, and Routledge) provide feeds for their current journal issues. ProQuest has prototype feeds for prepared searches in its ABI/Inform database. The day might come when Dissertation Abstracts offers an “Africa” feed for recent dissertations!

Our library offer a news feed for the call number-based “New Books” service that draws from our library catalog: http://newbooksplus.library.upenn.edu/cgi-bin/feedme.cgi?COMMUNITY=African+Studies&location=&daterange=curWeek.

Great stuff, but I’d rather see a new books feed from the Herskovits Library. The World Bank e-Library is hosted by Ingenta, which provides RSS feeds for new e-books.

The H-Net book review news feeds are separate channels that follow the H-Net discussion log scheme. Some review feeds are currently idle, others appear to be stillborn. I used RSS Mix, a free news feed aggregator web site, to build one feed simply by pasting the URLs for four relatively active H-Net book review feeds -- H-Africa, H-Atlantic, H-Luso-Africa, H-SAfrica -- into the web site’s text entry box. This merged H-Net African book review feed: http://www.rssmix.com/u/4642/rss.xml

Africana Libraries Newsletter No. 117                                  6                                                                            July 2005 shows some redundancy but provides a nice mix of reviewed books for our library users, and I shall almost certainly add it as a portlet on the sidebar of our African collections web page.

Directories of news feeds and weblogs appear and expand rapidly. The Wikipedia offers leads for finding these directories. I used the Syndic8 web site to track the rollout of AllAfrica.com’s RSS feed and to find other feeds on Africa.

You need a news feed reader. Your library’s systems people will always know just what to use, and they will go on about RSS and its multiple incompatible versions, RDF, and Atom formats, but you will need to choose between a standalone desktop feed reader and a web browser plug-in. I use the Sage plug-in with my FoxFire browser: hit <alt> s and it appears as a sidebar frame in the browser window.

To grab a news feed, look for “RSS” displayed as a hyperlink, a small orange “XML” button, a small green “RSS” button. Some web sites provide news feeds links on “Get Updates” pages. When you click on the “RSS” button, your browser window will fill with marked-up text: don’t panic – you should only be interested in the feed’s URL displaying in the browser window’s address box. Copy or drag that URL into your feed reader’s feed manager list or frame, and it’s ready for reading!

Some web sites offer OPML-format (Outline Processor Markup Language) news feeds. When the site’s OPML file is imported into a feed reader’s feed manager, individual feeds will appear as hierarchically-nested folders. I cribbed the New York Times OPML to create an outline of H-Net’s many Africa-related news feeds: http://www.staffweb.library.upenn.edu/~olson/africa/alm/hnet.opml.

4. Presenting news feeds to your library users.

Our web manager has installed Blosxom, an Open Source weblog editing tool adaptable for generating news feeds, and Feedreader for web presentation of news feeds. Using the feed template provided in our Blosxom installation, I created individual feeds for databases, e-journals, news sources, and e-book collections frequently used by Penn readers in African studies: http://www.library.upenn.edu/blos/feeds/Area_Studies.

Unlike news media feeds, these feeds will update infrequently; I’ll edit a feed if we subscribe to SABINET or NiPAD. I can create web pages and use Feedreader to embed these feeds so that the pages display each feed’s content. My specialized feeds are in one repository and their content appears on several web pages. When I update a feed, its content would update automatically on each page. I don’t have to hunt down each page to make changes.

In a prototype web research guide, “Major Penn Library resources on Africa and Africans”: http://gethelp.library.upenn.edu/guides/afrika/afrikabvRSS.html four lines of html code fills the page with content from these four feeds and the merged H-Net book review feed. The page’s odd look stresses its origin in feeds; its appearance can be edited in the page’s stylesheet. Every time the page is refreshed on a reader’s browser, the H-Net book reviews are updated.

"Fearfully technical," my domestic editor comments. But it isn’t! You’re hunting web sites routinely now – start looking for thatRSS icon. Blogs and feed directories are no more prone to self-promotion than the familiar discussion log. You install web browser plug-ins often without knowing. And if your web manager has installed feed builders and readers, your prose-writing skills need not involve more than compiling title / URL / brief description.

Announcements

Starting July 1, 2005, Karen Jean Hunt, Director of the John Hope Franklin Collection in the Rare Books, Manuscripts, Special Collection Library & African American Subject Librarian, will be assuming the responsibility for African Studies for the Perkins Library System. Thus her second title will now be: Subject Librarian for African and African American Studies. Karen Jean already works with faculty and students in the African and African-American Studies Program at Duke and has been collecting African Studies materials for the John Hope Franklin collection. This is a natural extension and enhancement of her work responsibilities. Karen Jean will also become a member of the extended International and Area Studies department. To contact her you can call 919 660-5922 or e-mail k.j.hunt@duke.edu.

Helene Baumann, who has been African Studies Librarian since joining the Collection Development Department as Bibliographer in 1985 (International and Area Studies was founded in the late 1980s), has decided to concentrate more fully on Western Europe and is delighted at Karen Jean's willingness to take over. She looks forward to working with Karen Jean in an advisory role over the next few months.

Helene is to be commended for the excellent work she has done in handling collection development for African Studies. She has worked with faculty and students and in addition, she has played an active role nationally as a member and as an officer in the Africana Librarians Council and the Center for Research Libraries' area studies program, the Cooperative Africana Microform Project (CAMP).

Respectfully Submitted by Helene Baumann, Duke University.

University of California, Berkeley

Africana/Reference Librarian

Assistant/Associate Librarian

$37,920 - $64,164 per annum, based upon qualifications.

The University of California, Berkeley seeks an Africana/Reference Librarian to select and manage Africana Studies materials. The Africana/Reference Librarian serves as liaison to faculty and students researching Africana through specialized reference service and instructional programs. The Africana/Reference Librarian also contributes to general reference services for the humanities and social sciences in the Doe/Moffitt Libraries.

Internationally renowned, the Berkeley Library is the oldest and largest library in the University of California system, and a major research facility. The Library serves over 23,000 undergraduates, 9,000 graduate students, and almost 1,500 faculty. Current collections include nearly 10 million volumes and about 50,000 current serial titles. Library facilities on the Berkeley campus include the Doe/Moffitt Libraries, the Bancroft Library, the East Asian Library and fifteen additional libraries serving subject specialties. The Library is a member of the Center for Research Libraries (CRL), the Association of Research Libraries (ARL), Online Computer Library Center (OCLC), and the Research Libraries Group (RLG). The Library is an active participant in the California Digital Library. The Library has a budget of over $50 million, employing nearly 375 FTE and more than 600 part-time students.

The Doe/Moffitt Libraries, the primary resource for humanities, social sciences, and undergraduate services, have a collection that totals 1.8 million volumes shelved onsite in the Gardner Stacks and in the Moffitt Undergraduate Library, and 2.8 million volumes stored at a remote shelving facility. The Research, Reference, and Collections Department has 34 permanent staff, including 19 librarians, who are responsible for building the print and electronic collections for Doe and Moffitt, providing reference service, engaging in library instruction activities, and serving as liaisons to more than 58 academic departments, centers, and programs on campus.

Responsibilities:

Specific responsibilities include oversight and expenditure authority for funds to acquire materials in the humanities and social sciences. The Librarian provides advice and counsel for improving cooperative collecting activities with other UC, California and United States academic libraries, as well as the establishment of programs and procedures to incorporate electronic resources into the Library's Africana collections.
In addition the incumbent will promote active consultation with and provide recommendations to others in the Doe/Moffitt Libraries and UCB subject libraries concerning selection of materials about Africa.

The incumbent will contribute to the development and integration of web-based resources for collection development, library instruction, and reference services. Selection responsibilities include building the print and electronic collections together with identification of reliable resources on the Internet and developing library user guides and Web pages to facilitate user access. As a member of the reference team, the librarian contributes to the constant improvement of research services and user education, and the creation of new services.

This position falls under the general direction of the Head, Research, Reference and Collections Department. An important and integral reference position, the Africana/Reference Librarian will contribute actively to general reference in the humanities and social sciences through service at the Doe and Moffitt reference desks and scheduled consultations at Research Advisory Services.

WorldCat reports that ninety libraries hold a copy of the California Newsreel video, Thunderbolt, a Nigerian drama directed by Tunde Kelani. From the rest of the large body of work of this “reluctant elder statesman of Nigerian cinema” (Trenton Daniel, Transition 95, 2005), only single copies of two fiction features and two copies of a documentary appear in WorldCat.

The Nigerian home video industry – from all accounts, a decentralized collection of producers dominated by distributors and the national censors board – is claimed to be the third largest global entertainment industry after Hollywood and Bollywood. The Nigerian industry is a straight-to-video shop. From Ken Nnebue’s early video hit features a dozen years ago, Aje Ni Iya Mi (in Yoruba, c. 1990-1993), Living in Bondage (in Igbo, 1992), and Glamour Girls (in English, 1994), Nollywood is now estimated to release more than 400 videos each year, comparable to US film output.

Nigerian videos get no respect. FESPACO ignored them for years. Until this spring – when AFI Silver ran a series, followed by this summer’s Nollywood Rising conference – the African Film Festival/NY served as the only Nigerian video exhibitor in the US, starting in 2001. The 1997 collection, Nigerian Home Videos, edited by Jonathan Haynes (expanded in a 2000 edition), remains the principal scholarly work, accompanied by a small and slowly growing body of journal articles. In recent years, an industry magazine has organized the THEMA Awards, an Abuja International Film Festival has issued at least one cycle of awards, and the (London) Afro-Hollywood Awards have been recognizing Nigerian videos for almost a decade.

Looking beyond Thunderbolt, I compiled a list of about 100 video titles, working from the Haynes collection and other readings. This approach gives students videos with some scholarly apparatus. For example, John McCall presents an ethnographic interview with a viewer of Blood Money 1/2 (Africa Today 49, 2002). Searching this list within the inventories of seven online US Nollywood vendors – African Online Shop, http://www.over2u.com Klub Afrik, or http://www.klubafrik.com (rental and purchase).
collections have multi-region DVD players, so not knowing the format of a video shouldn’t cause a problem.

Video film language is a secondary consideration. Most vendors group their videos in the same categories: Yoruba, Igbo, Hausa (less often), Pidgin (very rare), and a variety of genres including Christian. No vendor consistently indicates English subtitling and no vendor bothers to indicate the language of genre videos. In videos I’ve seen, actors switch into English for status or role purposes, so perhaps vendors can be forgiven their obscurantism.

Sequels are very common. Although some sequels are multi-parters (Living in Bondage 1/2, Ti Oluwa Ni Ile 1/3) or serials (Issakaba 1/4), most appear to be “Son of ...” knockoffs (Osuofia in London 1/2). A vendor’s brief blurb may be accurate, but you may end up looking for Klub Afrika buyer comments or fan chat in Naija web sites.

Western film scholarship stresses the auteur filmmaker but vendors try to sell movies. Where the scholarly literature discusses a video director or producer – Tunde Kelani for Mainframe, Amaka Igwe for Moving Movies – vendors advertise stars such as Nkem Owoh, Liz Benson, or Richard Mofe-Damijo (usually called “RMD”). Klub Afrik’s catalog presents personnel information most clearly.

“Caveat emptor” is a guideline and consolation when pursuing Nigerian video films, and we can all benefit from sharing our knowledge in collection building. Please pass on your thoughts, experiences, and recommendations through the ALN and Alcasalist.
