

M. Nazif Shahrani, born, raised and educated partly in Afghanistan, he completed his B.A at the University of Hawaii, Honolulu, and MA and Ph. D. degrees in anthropology from the University of Washington, Seattle. Currently he is Professor of Anthropology, Central Asian and Middle Eastern Studies at Indiana University, Bloomington. He has served as Chairman of the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures & Director of the Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies Program (2001-2004), and Director of Middle Eastern Studies Program (1991-1994) at Indiana University. Shahrani has held post-doctoral fellowships at Harvard and Stanford Universities and at the Woodrow Wilson Center for International Scholars at the Smithsonian Institution. He has conducted extensive ethnographic field research in Afghanistan, and studied Afghan refugee communities in Pakistan & Turkey (1980s). Since 1992 he has carried out field research in post-Soviet Muslim republics of Uzbekistan, Kazakhstan, and Kyrgyzstan. Since in the ouster of Taliban from power (2001), he has regularly visited Afghanistan, most recently in March 2006. He has published widely and is currently working on a book entitled Post-Taliban Afghanistan: The Challenges of State-Building, Governance and Security. For more information check <www.indiana.edu/~afghan>.