Mireille Djenno
Librarian for African Studies Program
Indiana University

In the first colloquium of the year, Librarian for African Studies, Mireille Djenno, presents an overview of new and continuing library and archival resources available through Indiana University Libraries. Of interest to established and emerging scholars of Africa, IU’s rich resources include primary and secondary source material from and about all regions of sub-Saharan Africa. Even if you are a regular user of library/archival sources, you will benefit from a broader understanding of the resources available, and the ever changing means of access, including emergent formats, platforms, and interfaces.
