This workshop is designed for scholars at any point in their career who want to publish their work. We will cover all phases of the publication process, including how to find the right publisher for your book, how to write a good book proposal, how to write for broader audiences, and what to expect during the review process and beyond.

Biography: Dee Mortensen
Dee Mortensen is Editorial Director at Indiana University Press. She acquires titles in African studies, philosophy, and religion. She has been with the Press for nearly 25 years and has been acquiring books since 2001. Titles she has acquired have received many book prizes, including the C. Wright Mills prize, the Herskovits award, and the Ballard prize in phenomenology. Indiana UP received the African Studies Association Service Award in 2014 because of her publishing activities.

Indiana University Press serves the world of scholarship and culture as a professional, not-for-profit publisher. Founded in 1950, the Press is recognized internationally as a leading academic publisher specializing in the humanities and social sciences. The Press produces approximately 120 new books and over 30 journal titles annually. It maintains an in print catalog of nearly 3,000 titles. Indiana is one of the largest public university presses, as measured by number of titles issued and income level. Major subject areas that the Press publishes include African, Jewish and Holocaust, Middle East, Russian and East European, and gender studies; anthropology, film, history, music, paleontology, philosophy, and religion.