“Resources and Techniques for Integrating Maps into your Research”

Theresa Quill, specialist in GIS mapping, will discuss how maps and Geographic Information Systems (GIS) can enhance your research and teaching. Whether you want to use print maps to demonstrate historical representations of space and changing borders, perform spatial analysis on your research data, make a custom map to illustrate your research sites or findings, or create a collaborative map with your classes, the IU Libraries are here to support you! This talk will cover core concepts of mapping and spatial analysis, examples of projects, and techniques to help you and your students be critical readers of maps and geographic information.
