

Lecturer Positions in Interior Design Studies at Indiana University, Bloomington

Join an engaging community of design practitioners and scholars in the Indiana University Interior Design Studies Program. These three Lecturer positions, for an initial appointment of three years, are based at Indiana University's main campus in Bloomington and offer an opportunity to join a vibrant and growing CIDA accredited program. The program is housed in a recently renovated complex of studio and support spaces. The program boasts state of the art technology and a growing collection of classic furniture pieces.

Qualifications

The successful candidates will have at least one degree in interior design, or a related design field. A Master's degree in design is highly desirable. Ideally, the candidate will have the relevant license for their field, e.g. that of the National Council of Interior Design Qualification (NCIDQ).

The successful candidates will have a portfolio of relevant design work demonstrating creativity of design process, representation, and presentation. In particular, the portfolio should demonstrate most of the following skills: hand drafting and lettering; hand rendering; physical model making; application of AutoCAD, 3D Studio Max, and Revit; proficiency with Adobe Illustrator, Photoshop, and InDesign; familiarity with web design tools such as DreamWeaver and Flash.

The successful candidates will be able to articulate a clear design philosophy that meaningfully relates programmatic issues to aesthetic considerations. Explicit evidence of a design process taken from conception to execution would be ideal.

The successful candidates will ideally have a minimum of two years teaching experience in a Council for Interior Design Accreditation (CIDA) program.

The successful candidate will be a creative designer who can bring examples of recent "real life" projects into the design studio for the students. Having a defined aesthetic sense, especially concerning concept and three-dimensional development, will be of great benefit.

The successful candidate will be comfortable team teaching in a multidisciplinary setting with those from other design disciplines.

Compensation

Salary commensurate with experience; comprehensive benefits program.

Application

Send resume or curriculum vitae, statement of design and/or teaching philosophy, digital portfolio, original transcripts, and names of three references to:

Terri Shockley
Administrative Assistant
Search and Screen Committee
Department of Apparel Merchandising and Interior Design
Indiana University
1021 E. Third Street
Memorial Hall East #239
Bloomington, IN 47405
(812) 855-4184
tshockle@indiana.edu

Note: Three letters of support are to be sent directly by individual references from 3 different sources/institutions.

Applications and supporting materials received before January 30, 2010 will be assured of consideration.

Indiana University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer. Culturally diverse candidates are invited and encouraged to apply.
