Keynote Address

How does state violence continue to maintain its legitimacy in an increasingly unequal world? Why do people consent to inequality, and even support its exacerbation? What kinds of ways of thinking can disrupt the ideological linchpins of inequality and injustice? This keynote talk considers the nature of police and state power in relation to the market, challenging listeners to reconceive protest and reform.

Friday, March 3rd, 4 p.m. in GA 1134
Followed by Reception at 5pm in GA 1060

Dr. Micol Seigel is Associate Professor in the Department of History and Department of American Studies at Indiana University. Her research interests lie in policing, prisons, and race in the Americas.