

CSG Justice Center Releases School Discipline Report

The Council of State Governments (CSG) Justice Center, recently released the School Discipline Consensus Report, a massive catalog of promising strategies for reforming school discipline. The report draws on diverse insights from the fields of education, behavioral health, law enforcement and juvenile justice and offers a consensus framework to address disparities in school discipline. Through feedback from more than 700 individuals it examines how to improve the conditions for learning for all students, responses to students' behavioral health needs, and school-police partnerships and juvenile justice outcomes. The strategies are practical, innovative and emphasize the importance of data-driven responses. For more information about the School Discipline Consensus Project and related resources, visit:
