

I would like you to think about what computational issue (algorithm or application, etc.) in computer vision is most challenging and interesting? Explain, in your own words, why the problem is hard and whether, and if so how, your brain may be able to deal with it.

Keep your answer to no more than 2 pages, including figures and text.