Retirement will bring few changes for Dégh

After 26 years of service to IU, Linda Dégh will retire in June 1990. Throughout her career, honors and awards have testified to the brilliance of her achievements. Only a few can be mentioned here.

In 1963 she received the International Pitré Folklore Prize for her book, Folktales and Society: Story-Telling in a Hungarian Peasant Community. She was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship (1970–71) and a Fulbright Award (1984–85).

Linda Dégh chaired the Folklore Institute between 1981 and 1983 and in recognition of her outstanding international reputation, she was awarded the title of distinguished professor of folklore in 1981. In addition, she has held many offices in learned societies, including the presidency of the American Folklore Society in 1981–82.

As a testimonial to their respect and affection, students and colleagues presented her with a festschrift, Folklore on Two Continents (Trickster Press, 1980). Linda Dégh has always shared willingly and generously her scholarship and has freely given of herself to her students. Demanding the highest dedication and effort from them, she has at the same time opened vistas for them and inspired many of them with her own enthusiasm and love for her subjects.

She has directed many significant doctoral dissertations, and several of her students have gone on to fill important roles as teachers and researchers.

Retirement from teaching here at Indiana University will actually bring few changes for Linda Dégh. Her research will continue. She has been invited to teach as a visiting professor at other universities, and she is already planning other international conferences to be held in Bloomington and elsewhere. Her students and colleagues look forward to her continued participation in many aspects of the Folklore Institute’s activities and wish her the best in this new phase of her career.

—Warren E. Roberts

Here's to the next ten!

Don't miss the folklore alumni reunion

Alumni are registering for the Folklore Institute reunion, May 14–15.

The reunion will be structured around informal morning presentations honoring Linda Dégh and Warren Roberts. The afternoons and evenings will be open for socializing and exploring. Alumni with a taste for nostalgia are invited to make arrangements with us to bunk in Read Hall, though people can of course stay with friends or at one of the several hotels in the Bloomington area.

Registration fees for the reunion are $30 per couple or $20 for singles. Children are invited to join us at no additional cost.

We are receiving enthusiastic responses and requests for additional registration materials. Some alumni may not have received their invitation letters because we may not have their most recent address change. If you need these materials, please contact Rachel K. Taber, Folklore Reunion, Folklore Institute, Indiana University, 504 N. Fess, Bloomington, IN 47405.

Please spread the news and “Come on back home to Indiana!”

John McDowell presents Velma Carmichael with a pin commemorating 15 years of service to IU.

Fifteen years of service to Indiana University, twelve with the Folklore Institute, deserve a celebration. And that is exactly what happened. On Feb. 9, Syd Grant arranged a surprise party for Velma Carmichael to celebrate her 15 years here. Guests included folklore faculty, students, and staff. John McDowell gave a witty speech as he presented her with Personnel’s silver pin for service. On a flower-laden table was a cake decorated with the words: “Only 10 More!” Velma, may the next ten be both happy and healthy!
Robb and Wheeler win 1989–90 Dorson Awards

Museums in Costa Rica

The Dorson Dissertation Award allowed me to travel to Costa Rica and conduct field research that I would have been unable to do otherwise. It permitted me to develop a fixed timeline, terminate an unrewarding part-time job, and focus on my dissertation research. The Dorson Award also allowed me to engage a research assistant to help carry out various internal museum profiles, including organizational structure, programming, collections, attendance, and funding.

By the spring of 1989, I had completed preliminary work for my dissertation on “The Role of Museums in (National) Development.” However, lacking funds and the inspiration that comes with financial support, I had been unable to pursue further research. I left in early October for San Jose, Costa Rica, and spent ten weeks examining the role of museums in that country.

Through my preliminary research, I learned what museums and museologists say museums do. The case study in Costa Rica allowed me to look at museums in action; museums in relationship to their audience; and museums in their cultural, political, social, and economic contexts. I gathered information on public policy indicators, museum operational indicators, and external indicators.

In my opinion, the codification of the values, traditions, beliefs, and practices of a culture are revealed in cultural policies, and they are expressed in museum statements and legislation affecting museums. Operational activities of museums shed light not only on the actual role of museums, but on their unintentional and unofficial role as well. Operational indicators were studied through museum behavior toward its audience and attitudes of museum visitors and nonvisitors toward the museum.

External indicators also provided rewarding data. Some external indicators having interests that could include the use of museums are federal economic planning, foreign business investments, commissions on special populations, tourism, and educational planning.

I returned from Costa Rica with research data in many pounds of excess baggage and am happily completing my dissertation. Now, I am able to share both process and product. In the spring, I will return to Costa Rica to present some of my findings at the International Council on Museums Colloquium for Latin America and the Caribbean. Shortly after that, I’ll give a talk about my fieldwork, entitled “Venturesome Woman,” at a women’s conference in Cincinnati.

I began my PhD program with Richard Dorson’s help. He taught Folklore Theory and Techniques during my first semester at IU. It gives me pleasure to think of him helping me to complete the degree through the Richard M. Dorson Dissertation Research Award.

—Karyl Robb

Flamenco music in Spain

Perhaps the most rewarding and interesting experience of my stay was the opportunity to work with Katherine on a project in Niebla where we went on the romeria de la virgen del pino. This involved a day long pilgrimage on foot and on horseback, followed by a religious ceremony in the evening and a night of drinking and dancing sevillanas. This was a wonderful opportunity for me to do some joint fieldwork and to look at “flamenco” and “Gypsy” identity as it is transformed into an Andalusian regional identity in the popular flamenco-derived sevillanas song and dance form.

As much as I tried to circumvent problems by narrowing my research questions to issues of individual practice, I found fieldwork on flamenco problematic. Flamenco music is technically, emotionally, and theoretically demanding, requiring extensive daily practice. Flamenco identity is difficult to define because of the illusiveness of “Gypsy” identity and because of the impact of romantic nationalism, Spanish literati, foreigners, urban life, public commercial performance, outside musical fusions, “classical” flamenco dance schools, etc. Flamenco scholarship is haunted by polemics about authenticity and, in the end, it is difficult to distinguish a working definition of flamenco from personal likes and dislikes. I saw a lot in three months, but I’d like another ten years, please!

—William Wheeler

Karyl Robb

William Wheeler
Bookwarming party held

In 1988 a new tradition to honor faculty members who have recently published books began with the publication of Ruth Stone's Dried Millet Breakign (IU Press). This fall was especially rich with the production of four books: Linda Dégh, Folktales and Society (reprint, IU Press); Sandra Dolby Stahl, Literary Folkloristics and the Personal Narrative (IU Press); Henry Glassie, The Spirit of Folk Art (Abrams); and John McDowell, Sayings of the Ancestors (University of Kentucky Press).

Faculty, students, staff, and members of the authors' families attended two separate book-signing receptions where the new books were made available at discount rates. John McDowell and Sandy Stahl were feted on Oct. 13, with Linda Dégh and Gregory Schrempp delivering brief commentaries on the books. Warren Roberts and Hasan El-Shamy made the presentations at the party for Henry Glassie and Linda Dégh on Nov. 17. This newly established tradition is a congenial and collegial occasion during which we all share in the successes of the Folklore Institute.

Folklore to assist in MLA indexing project

The Folklore Collection and the Folklore Institute are participating in a joint pilot project with the Modern Language Association for the enhancement of the MLA's annual international bibliography.

Because of the international reputation of the Folklore Collection, the Institute's faculty and folklore librarian were identified for this pilot project, which provides a home base for indexing the folklore volume of the Bibliography. If successful, this cooperative project will be extended to other research libraries with well-established and well-funded collections in particular areas.

Polly Grimshaw will manage the operations of the project, and part-time folklore assistant Moira Smith will coordinate the volunteer student and faculty indexers. We have been very pleased with the enthusiastic response that students and faculty have shown. To date, 20 students and faculty have become MLA indexers. Alumni participation is welcome; if anyone wishes to be in this project and receive a copy of a journal to index, please contact Polly Grimshaw, IU Library.

In the past few years, many titles on the MLA's folklore master list have not been indexed. We hope that this new cooperative project will enhance the coverage of the Bibliography, making it an even more valuable tool for folklorists.

Tell us about yourself . . .

Pass along the latest about yourself to Traditions, Indiana University Alumni Association, IMU M-17, Bloomington, IN 47405. Please use this form for address correction.

Your news

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

________________________________________________________________________

Name:
Address:
IU degrees/dates:
1989 Friends of Folklore

We would like to thank the people who have contributed to the Folklore Institute in 1990. Support of the Folklore Enrichment, Ethnomusicology, and Dorson Memorial funds enables the Institute to continue to provide quality programs and expand its educational resources.

In 1989, the Dorson Dissertation Research Awards have allowed two outstanding graduate students to conduct fieldwork they would not have been able to pursue otherwise. Your donations also help to publish Traditions, to host the annual alumni reception at AFS, and to sponsor lectures by visiting scholars.

Also in 1989, the Folklore Student Association took the Dorson Memorial Library under its wing. After ni neorganizing, cleaning, and moving, the library is open to researchers once again. It is located in Morrison Hall across from the Archives of Traditional Music.

Plans were set in motion in 1989 for this year's first-ever Folklore Institute reunion. Activities such as these cannot be supported by University funds alone. We depend on our folklore “family” of faculty, alumni, and friends for the crucial additional funds which make our goals realities.

We are deeply indebted and grateful to the following contributors for their thoughtful support in 1989:

Dr. Charles Siegel Adams
Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bovey, Jr.
Dr. Jan Harold Brunvand
Dr. William Manning Clements
Dr. Francis A. DeCaro
Mr. James Henry Faris* (Contributor)
Ms. Annette Bacola Fromm* (Contributor)
Dr. Henry Glassie
Dr. Hiroko Ikeda* (Patron)
Mrs. Helen Johnsons
Dr. Rosan Augusta Jordan
Dr. Kathleen E.B. Manley* (Contributor)
Dr. and Mrs. Richard E. Meyer
Mr. and Mrs. William E. Sellers
Dr. Gary Ward Stanton* (Contributor)
Ms. Ann Carling Swartzell* (Contributor)
Dr. Carolyn Lipson Walker

* Indicates membership in the College of Arts and Sciences “Dean’s Society;” Benefactor: $1,000.00 and over; Patron: $500-$999; Sponsor: $250-$499; Contributor: $100-$249.

News of students and alumni

Garry W. Barrow, at the Virginia Federation for the Humanities, is coordinator for the newly established Virginia Folklife Program at the Virginia Foundation for the Humanities and Public Policy.

Margaret G. Hagler, MA’56, PhD’71, retired in 1982 and is developing writing courses for Colorado Free University, Denver. She is also director of the Writers’ Circle.

Martha T. Blache, PhD’77, is professor of folklore in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Buenos Aires. She is also the director of that university’s Folklore Project.

Anthony T. Hellenberg, MA’77, is director of academic advising at St. John’s University, Collegeville, Minn.

Glenda M. Keyworth, MA’78, is the director of academic computing at St. Edward’s University, Austin, Texas.

Jens Lund, PhD’83, edited Folk Arts of Washington State (Washington State Folklore Council). The book contains articles written by Lund as well as by Phyllis A. Harrison, PhD’83, Janet Crofton Gilmore, MA’73, PhD’81, and Harry A. Gammerdinger, MA’81, MS’83, PhD’88.

Regina Bendix, PhD’87, finished teaching as a visiting assistant professor in folklore at the University of California. She is in Turkey, where she and her husband are leading a study abroad program for Lewis and Clark College. Last November, Peter Lang Publishers published her book, Backstage Domains: Playing William Tell in Two Swiss Communities.

Thomas Walker, MA’82, was a conference organizer for “A Conversation of Learned Hands: Maritime Culture, 1930–1960,” which took place in Brooklyn this past February.

John B. Wolford, MA’82, has been appointed to the student advisory committee to the dean of the University libraries and to the advisory board of the Indiana Arts Commission for 1989–1990.

Congratulations to our newest PhDs

Gail Matthews: “Looking at Life Funny: Reflexivity in American Ventriloquism”

Eren Giray-Saul: “Jula Oral Narratives in Bobo-Dioulasso, Burkina Faso”

Lee Irwin: “The Bridge of Dreams: Myth, Dreams, and Visions in Native North America”

Carl Rahkonen: “The Kantele Traditions of Finland”

Elizabeth (Betsy) Peterson: “Trickster and Trader: Portrait of an Afro-American Entrepreneur”

INDIANA UNIVERSITY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
Indiana Memorial Union, M-17/Bloomington, IN 47405

Non-Profit Org.
U.S. Postage
PAID
Indiana University
Alumni Association

Traditions

is published by the Indiana University Alumni Association, in cooperation with the Folklore Institute and the College of Arts and Sciences Alumni Association, to encourage alumni interest in and support for Indiana University.

Folklore Institute
Chair ........................................Richard Bauman
News Editors ............Syd Grant, Rachel Taber
College of Arts and Sciences
Dean ..................Morton Lowengrub
Director of Development ..............Susan Green
IU Alumni Association

University Director for Alumni Affairs ...................Jerry F. Tar
Alumni Director ..............John D. Hobson
Editor, Constituent
Publications...............Bradley R. Leftwich
Editorial Assistant ............Shawna Hornsby