

Course GRAD-I701 Multidisciplinary Seminar on Issues and Approaches in Global Studies*

Fall Semester 2013 — Section 7706
Seminar Room, 201 N. Indiana Ave.
Friday 9:00 a.m. - 11:30 a.m.

The overall goal of this seminar is to help graduate students generate a global research framework that incorporates various disciplinary perspectives and complements and strengthens students' disciplinary and regionally specific academic interests. The seminar is designed to stimulate students to think critically about a broad range of theoretical and methodological issues involved in global research, including empirical methods, ethics, qualitative and quantitative approaches, tracking the intersection of the global and local, and global research designs from different disciplinary perspectives. In addition to providing an analytical framework for global scholarship, the seminar also creates an interdisciplinary community of scholars and as such places a strong emphasis on attendance and participation, peer review, and presenting critical analyses in a scholarly manner.

Graduate students from a wide range of disciplines and professional schools, including MA students and those who are working on preliminary dissertation research designs, will benefit from this interdisciplinary seminar. Students will be required to present a critical evaluation of a dissertation of their choice, compile an annotated bibliography, develop a global framework for approaching their academic interests, and generate a preliminary research design to explore global phenomena.

If you are interested in learning more about this seminar, contact:

Hilary E. Kahn, Director
Center for the Study of Global Change
201 N. Indiana Ave.
Bloomington, IN 47408-4001
Phone: 855- 5545
E-mail: hkahn@indiana.edu

For more information about the Global Studies Ph.D. Minor program:
www.indiana.edu/~global/academic/minor.php

NOTE: This course will fulfill a requirement for the Global Studies Ph.D. Minor, which will soon be integrated into the new School for International and Global Studies and the Department of International Studies.