Explore the History and Philosophy of Science and Medicine at IU’s Science Fest!

Saturday, October 27, 2018

Department will again be joining with others around campus in celebrating science at the Science Fest. Come see an example of the sort of alchemical “transmutation” that motivated early chemists or help us explore what a “drop” is in our group experiment in the philosophy of measurement. Or take a break and relax at our coloring table of historical scientific images from the Color Our Collections project (http://library.nyam.org/colorourcollections/participating-institutions/).

Find us in the Student Building, Room 138, for a foray into the fascinating history and ongoing philosophy of scientific discovery!
