The INTL News

Message from the Director

Welcome to what is fast becoming an annual tradition at International Studies – the INTL News. As I write, the program continues to grow. We now have approximately 225 majors and 50 graduates. On October 3 we hosted an open house for the top graduate schools in international affairs/relations/studies that came to campus to recruit our students, and we are increasingly making inroads with employers who seek out our program’s “Global Graduates” – a term we recently trademarked. By all indications, the International Studies Program is considered one of the finest of its kind in the US.

Kudos aside, the current academic year is an extremely important one for the program. It is the year to look and see where we have been and look and see where we wish to go. Among the changes that we have already made are a renaming of the old theme “Markets and Governance” to “Global Integration and Development,” an expansion of the theme “Global Environment” to “Global Health and Environment” to reflect the interconnectedness of public health and environmental issues in much of the Global South, and the folding of the theme “Rituals and Beliefs” into the broader “Culture and the Arts.” In addition we have expanded the focus on issues of negotiation, ethics and the image of America abroad and we have made a course on career development a requirement of the program. This year also marks the first official review of the program, and with the review, I am sure there will be more changes in the years to come. This year also marks the end of my term as director. Whether I am reappointed for another term or not, I can guarantee you that the International Studies Program will continue to push the envelope of international education in the US in the coming years.

If you have any suggestions about how we can improve our program, or anything else having to do with the program please pass them along. We continue to be grateful for your support, and you will find those who have contributed to our program listed elsewhere in our newsletter. Those recognized have contributed financially, offered workshops on careers and shared their knowledge with our students at various points in the last couple of years. If you’d like to contribute to International Studies with your time or money, I’d be eager to talk with you. Most of all, I hope that each of you can take a few seconds to periodically drop me an email at knudsen@indiana.edu to let me know what you are doing and how life is treating you. I’ll try to do the same.

Message from Tracy Bee,
Academic Advisor

Every week I talk to at least one high school student interested in our program. They come from all over the country, and they come because the International Studies Program at IU has so much to offer. No matter how committed they are, they all ask the same question: “What can I do with an International Studies major?” The answer to this question is both difficult and easy. It’s also flippant and annoying: “What do you want to do?”

I might have even said this to you when you first came to see me. I’m not too original. The same cannot be said of you. Looking through the list of recent graduates, I’m gratified to see the varied career and educational paths some of you have taken. Many of you are doing what you wanted to do. For those of you who are making your way and feel we might have had a little influence, don’t forget where you came from. Contact us if you have internship or job openings in your organization or would be interested in talking about your job experiences.

If you aren’t on the right path, my flippant and annoying questions are “Why not?” and “What are you going to do about it?”

What can you do about it? Seek an internship or volunteer to get the entry level job experience in the field you want. Don’t be afraid to start small to gain experience. Look at options for further education, professional development or training. Work on perfecting your foreign language skills through language exchange or classes. You have probably heard some of this before.

What if you don’t know what you want? There are many resources if you’re at a crossroads and don’t know which way to turn. Recent graduates can take advantage of the Career Development Center’s services for one year after graduation. The IU Alumni Association also has career services (http://alumni.indiana.edu/career/index.shtml). INTL has created a listserv for graduates. Once a week or so, we send international job and internship postings. This can give you an idea of some of the options available. If you are interested in joining the International Studies Graduate Listserv (intlgrads-l), write me at tbee@indiana.edu or intl@indiana.edu.

If you haven’t already guessed it, this year I’m focusing on career development for current students and alums. Specifically I’m learning more about the jobs and careers available to International Studies graduates and gathering more information searching for a job and choosing a career. Feel free to share your experience or what you know about your field. Your frustrations and triumphs can help other students and help further the conversation that starts with “What can you do with an International Studies major?”

Goings On at INTL

Robert Affe and Sue Tuohy were awarded the first two International Studies Outstanding Teacher Awards. Robert Affe’s award was for outstanding teaching in I206: Nations, States, and Boundaries in Spring 2005, while Sue Tuohy’s was for outstanding teaching in I100: Introduction to International Studies in Fall 2005. Two awards for outstanding teaching are given each year based on student class evaluations.
Monique Ilboudo, Minister for Human Rights, Burkina Faso and international renowned author was a guest of the International Studies program in March. As part of her stay, she met with several classes and the International Studies Student Association, and gave a formal public lecture on human rights in West Africa.

Arthur Cyr from the Clausen Center in Kenosha, Wisconsin visited the program in April and again presented lectures on U.S. foreign policy in I100 and I206.

Nicola DeJager, Doctoral Student in International Relations in the Department of Political Sciences at the University of Pretoria, South Africa spoke to students in I206 about the concept of 'state' in Africa.

Khumisho Moguerane, Doctoral Student in the Department of Sociology at the University of Pretoria, South Africa spoke to students in I204 about social movements in South Africa and the complexity of the HIV/AIDS issue.

INTL Events Honor Faculty and Students

INTL held four events during the year to honor faculty and students. INTL faculty members were honored at a party in April. The event recognized the founders of the INTL program as well as current core and affiliated faculty. We feted December graduates and their families at Le Petite Café. Our April pizza lunch was a time for all of the current students to get together and talk. The May and August graduates and their families had a dinner prepared by Dan and Linda Knudsen, Tracy Bee and Linda Day at the Knudsen’s home.

New Hires in INTL

We were fortunate to have the College or Arts and Sciences again hire new professors as part of the Commitment to Excellence program at Indiana University that have a 25% teaching commitment to International Studies and that are members of our core faculty. This year we welcome:

James Biles is Assistant Professor of Geography. He received his Ph.D. from Michigan State University. His recent research explores the local impacts and unintended consequences of globalization, specifically changes in access to credit and banking services in southern Mexico as a result of increasing financial integration and the impacts of “walmartization” on the supply chains of food retailers and the livelihoods of small-scale agricultural producers. Biles also just concluded the third year of Globalization and Sustainable Development in Latin America, an NSF-funded Research Experiences for Undergraduates project in Yucatán, Mexico. He teaches I203: Markets and Governance/Global Integration and Development.

Paulette Lloyd is Assistant Professor of Sociology. She received her Ph.D. from University of California, Los Angeles in 2005. Prior to coming to IU, she was a Postdoctoral Research Associate at the Princeton Institute for International and Regional Studies, a consultant for the International Network Archives, Princeton University and a Visiting Scholar with the Academic Council on the United Nations at Yale University. Her research interests include globalization and comparative regionalization, political sociology, social network analysis, and the role of international organizations in social movements and human rights. She teaches I204: Human Rights and Social Movements.

Brian Rathbun is Assistant Professor of Political Science. He received his Ph.D. in Cultural Anthropology from the University of Chicago. His primary research and teaching interests are in the areas of Latin America, social movements, ethnic politics, development, social theory, and political ecology. He teaches I204: Human Rights and Social Movements.

INTL External Council

The INTL External Council role is to advise the director. They point out areas of curriculum where we can do better and they ensure that our curriculum prepares students for the real world. External Council members serve staggered three-year terms. The current INTL External Council is:

Jill F. Byrnes graduated from the University of California at Santa Cruz and received a Master's degree in East European history and a certificate in Russian & East European studies from Indiana University. She has served as a consular officer in Belgrade, Rome, and Moscow, and as the first U.S. Consul in Kiev. She has also served as an economic officer in Belgrade and Zagreb and has completed assignments in Washington in the Bureau of Consular Affairs, the Bureau of Personnel, and as Special Assistant to the Assistant Secretary for Oceans, Environment and Scientific Affairs. She is currently Counselor for Science and Technology with the U.S. Embassy in Rome. She speaks Italian, French, German, Serbo-Croatian and Russian.

Shaun M. Byrnes recently retired from the U.S. Department of State. He served twice as a political officer in Moscow and was also Deputy Chief of Mission in the first U.S. embassy to newly independent Ukraine, political officer in Belgrade, and political minister counselor in Rome. Mr. Byrnes was chief of the Kosovo Diplomatic Observer Mission prior to the 1999 conflict there, participated in the international conference at Rambouillet, and subsequently led the first U.S. diplomatic mission in the soon-to-be independent state. He also served as Chief of Mission in Montenegro. He has spent time in Washington at the Soviet Desk, as deputy director of the Office of Eastern European and Yugoslav Affairs, and at the NSC. Prior to retiring, Mr. Byrnes was Special Advisor on the Balkans at the Department of State. Following retirement, he has carried out projects for the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) and the Washington-based international NGO Public International Law and Policy Group (PILPG) in the Balkans, consulted for the Department of State and written an occasional column for the Rome daily Europa and the Belgrade weekly, The Belgrade Times. He is currently the Director for Europe and Central Asia of the Rome-based international consulting and development firm, Cui Prodest, L.L.C. Mr. Byrnes served as an officer in the U.S. Navy prior to entering the Foreign Service. He received his B.A. from Yale University and an M.A. in modern Russian history from Stanford University.
James W. Farnsworth received a Bachelor of Science in Geology from Indiana University and a Master of Science in Geophysics from University of Western Michigan. Mr. Farnsworth is President and Chief Operating Officer of Cobalt International Energy, a private equity funded limited partnership engaged in the international oil and gas exploration. Previously he worked for over 20 years for BP, where most recently, he was V.P. Exploration and technology, responsible for world-wide exploration and technology and based in London. He previously served as Vice President, BP North American. He also has held positions of responsibility in Deep Water Development and Production, Alaska Exploration and Development, and Managerial and Commercial positions in Scotland and BP’s Headquarters in London.

Robert N. Johnson received a Bachelor of Arts in Economics and Geography from Indiana University in 1988. He is the Region Director (Retail) of the Pizza Direct Store Delivery division for Kraft Foods, Inc. and his current territory is comprised of the Chicago region (75% Illinois and 30% Indiana). Throughout his 16 year career at Kraft, he has chosen cutting edge and non-traditional opportunities ranging from field assignments to national accounts to corporate headquarters. Over the last decade he has managed multiple assignments well over $100 million in revenue.

Swadesh S. Kalsi is a graduate of London School of Economics; Lincoln's Inn, London, U.K.; and George Washington University Law School. He has certificates from the Academy of American and International Law, Texas and The Hague Academy of International Law, The Netherlands. Mr. Kalsi was previously a Barrister-at-Law in the Offices of S. Gautama, Nairobi, Kenya. His practice is concentrated in international business and corporate law. Prior to joining the firm, Mr. Kalsi served 19 years as the corporate counsel for Cummins Engine Company, Inc., in Columbus, Indiana. He is currently an Adjunct Professor of International Trade Law with the Indiana University School of Law. Born in Nairobi, Kenya, Mr. Kalsi is fluent in Hindi and Punjabi.

Janet S. Smith holds a Bachelor of Arts in English and a “heavy” minor in psychology from Indiana University. She also met state certification requirements for teaching. She currently serves as President of JSMITH Consulting L.L.C. which provides consulting services on railroad transportation technology and business processes. The majority of her firm’s work has been for the Union Internationale des Chemin de Fer (UIC) based in Paris, France. Prior to starting her own company, Ms. Smith spent 30 years in the North American railroad industry furnishing planning, consultation, re-engineering and advisory services on railroad business rules, software application development, data requirements and future system direction to RAILINC (the industry data processing organization), Association of American Railroads, industry-wide committees, individual railroads, groups of railroads and other organizations.

Nicholas L. Strout holds a Bachelor of Arts degree in Germanic studies and comparative literature and a Master of Arts in comparative literature from Indiana University. He was a DAAD post-graduate research fellow at the University of Hamburg. Currently, Mr. Strout is Senior Vice President and General Manager, International Businesses, with Minntech Corporation, a subsidiary of Cantel Medical Corporation. He has been with Minntech since 1996. Prior to joining their Minneapolis headquarters in 2001, he worked for Minntech B.V., a subsidiary in Heerlen, the Netherlands, where he was responsible for Minntech’s European and Asian sales. He has held management positions in sales and marketing with German medical device manufacturers Drägerwerk AG and B. Braun Melsungen AG and with the German offices of US-based Medtronic prior to joining Minntech.

Steven L. Tuchman holds a Bachelor of Arts in history from Indiana University; studied international law at City of London College and holds a J.D. from Indiana University Indianapolis Law School. He is currently Director, Lewis & Kappes, P.C. where he practices immigration and nationality law, real estate law, and handles business representation, and trusts, estates and guardianships. He was named Indiana “Super Lawyer” in 2004, 05 and 06. He also serves as Consul for the Royal Danish Consulate, located in Indianapolis, serving the interests of Denmark and Danish citizens in the lower Midwest. Prior to joining Lewis & Kappes, he worked for Melvin Simon & Associates, Den Danske Bank and was in private practice. In addition to his legal work, he is a Commissioner of the Indiana Arts Commission and the Indianapolis Historic Preservation Commission and Chairman of the Board of Directors of American Cabaret Theater and the Indianapolis Committee on Foreign Relations. He was named a Sagamore of the Wabash in 2004.

The INTL Internal Board

Every program and department at IU is governed by its faculty. The director and staff simply administer programs at the behest of the program faculty. Because International Studies is an interdisciplinary major with no faculty, our program is governed by our Internal Advisory Board. This year’s Board is:

Fritz Breithaupt is Associate Professor of Germanic Studies and serves as Director of West European Studies and Co-Director of European Union Center of Excellence. His research concerns intellectual history from 18th century to present, the literature of German and European Modernism, theories of money from a cultural perspective, and the history of the modern self.

Robert Eno is Chair of the Department of East Asian Languages and Cultures (EALC). His research fields are the history, religion, and philosophical thought of ancient China, with current focus on the origins of Confucianism and paleographic sources from the period 1200-200 B.C. He received his doctorate from the University of Michigan in 1984 and came to Indiana University the following year. He has served terms as Director of IU’s former East Asian Summer Language Institute and as Bloomington faculty president. In addition to EALC, he teaches courses in the Departments of Philosophy and History.

Ilana Gershon is a Professor in Communication and Culture. Her background is in cultural anthropology, and she researches Pacific diasporas, especially in New Zealand and California. Her interests are in indigenous politicians, transnational migration, and how knowledge circulates. She teaches courses such as Cultures of Democracy; and Ethnicity, Class and the Model U.S. Citizen. She teaches I205: International Communication.

Jeffrey L. Gould is Rudy Professor of History and since 1995 he has served as the Director of the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies. He is recognized a specialist on Central American social movements, ethnic conflicts and political violence. He has taught on these subjects and published widely in academic journals. In 2002, he was awarded a John Simon Guggenheim fellowship to write a book on events and memories surrounding the insurrection and massacres in El Salvador, in 1932. Gould received his undergraduate education at Yale (B.A. History, 1976). He received a Licenciatura degree in Latin American Studies at the Universidad Nacional Autónoma (Costa Rica) in 1981. He pursued graduate studies in Latin American history at Yale (PhD. 1988).

Shane Greene is Assistant Professor in the Department of Anthropology and was awarded a PhD in Cultural Anthropology from the University of Chicago. His primary research and teaching interests are in the areas of Latin America, social movements, ethnic politics, development, social theory, and political ecology. In addition to courses in Anthropology he teaches I203 Global Markets and Governance.

Christiane Gruber is Assistant Professor of Islamic Art. She received a Ph.D. from the University of Pennsylvania in 2005. Her research interests are in illustrated "Books of the Prophet Muhammad's Ascension" (Mi'rajnamas) and Islamic calligraphy. She is currently teaching a course on Islamic architecture and will offer a course on Persian painting in the spring. Prior to coming to I.U., Christiane lived in Cairo, Tehran, and Istanbul. She teaches I201: Culture and the Arts.

Kirstine Lindemann is Senior Assistant Dean and Director of Undergraduate Academic Affairs for the College of Arts and Sciences at Indiana University. She earned her Ph.D. in German Studies from IU, and she teaches in that department when time allows. Currently not actively engaged in research, she focuses her attention on undergraduate students and the education they (need to) receive. Her most recent international travels were to a workshop in Copenhagen and a middle school in Manisa.

Brian Rathbun is Assistant Professor of Political Science. Prior to his appointment he was assistant professor at McGill University. He completed his doctorate in political science in 2002 at the University of California, Berkeley. His first book, Partisan Interventions: European Party Politics and Peace Enforcement in the Balkans (Cornell University Press, 2004) explores the effect of partisan ideology on definitions of the national interest, in particular whether or not to engage in humanitarian intervention. He teaches courses on international relations theory, human rights, European foreign policy and international organizations.

Ron Sela is Assistant Professor of Central Asian history. He holds the Ph.D. in Central Eurasian Studies from Indiana University. His research interests are in the history of Muslim peoples, and in political and cultural self-representation in the Islamic world, focusing on Central Asia. He teaches I206: Nations, States and Boundaries, as well as courses on history, historiography and travel literature in the Department of Central Eurasian Studies. Prior to coming to I.U., Sela taught at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor and at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. He is currently writing a book on stories and storytellers in Central Asia.

Kathleen Sideli is Associate Dean, International Programs and Director of the Office of Overseas Study at Indiana University. Her active career includes contributions to three editions of NAFSA's Guide to Education Abroad for Advisers and Administrators, chair of SECUSSA (1999-00), chair of the IIE/SECUSSA Data Collection Committee (1999-2003) and chair of the Board of Directors and founding president of the Forum on Education Abroad.

Leah Vanwey is Assistant Professor of Sociology. She is a social demographer who studies migration, remittances and population and environment. Her most recent research examines the effects of settler households on the social and environmental landscape in the Brazilian Amazon, and intergenerational exchanges of monetary and other forms of support in the Brazilian Amazon and the United States. In addition to I202: Global Environment, she teaches undergraduate courses on Global Environment, Population and Environment, and Social Statistics. She teaches graduate courses on Migration and Transnationalism, and on Population and Environment.

Recent Graduates

December 2005
Alexander Borowicz
Nely Cervantes
Jaden McNeely
Kelly Scheffler

May 2006
Megan Alvarez
Ginger Barnes
Adreinne Bock
Laura Bowman
Matthew Crawford
Rachel Eyermann
Steffanie Feuer
Michael Folkmier
Mark Gromski
Monika Hartman
Carolyn Hillebrand
Jessica Hillsley
Jaime Katz
Jack Knifley
Deborah Kogut
Jeffrey Lightfoot
Tommijo Loudermilk
Alvi Naduev
Tony Papariella
Samita Pendse
Jane Penley
Ryan Rindo
Drew Rogers
Laura Rogers
Suzanne Thompson
Cynthia Valentin
Kara Vanni
Michele Wirth

August 2006
Yael Asner
Allison Buess
Alexis Charizopoulos
Jennifer Larson
Kevin Malone
Elan Neiger
Paul Scott Thacker
Jennifer Vang
Lucas Weeks
Thomas Wilkins

Students in the News

Anne Gorman was awarded the Abel Scholarship from the College of Arts and Sciences.

Inna Kolesnikova was awarded the Sally Kissinger Wilt Merit Scholarship from the College of Arts and Sciences.

Katherine Crank was awarded the Jeanice Bartling Lewis Memorial Scholarship from the Arts and Sciences.

Phi Beta Kappa

Fall 2006
Amanda Dorn, Anne Gorman, Meredith Morgan, Anna Yuan

Spring 2006
Adrienne Bock, Laura Rogers, Katherine Roth, Lucas Weeks

Fall 2005
Michael Folkmier, Kimberly Stoltz

Spring 2005
Sara-Daisy Dygert, Mark Gromski

Student Profile

Chiara Galimberti-Winners (class of 2008) is a triple major in International Studies, Art History and Painting. Born in Italy and partially blind since infancy, she came to the US as an exchange student and graduated from an American high school. She is active in the Community Bike Project, and works as a volunteer at Boxcar Books and the Midwest Pages to Prisoners Project. She also volunteers through the Middle Way House domestic violence shelter as an on-scene advocate providing support for victims of sexual/domestic violence at Bloomington Hospital. She is an accomplished artist and a single mother with 7-year old twins. Despite her many outside commitments, she is an outstanding student and maintains one of the highest grade point averages in our program. Her infectious enthusiasm and her unsinkable attitude are widely admired by her peers.

Alumni News

Class of 2004

Rachel Barnhard lives in Nashville, TN promoting music videos at AristoMedia, an independent marketing firm. She is also the secretary for the Davidson County Young Democrats and the Community Outreach Coordinator for the Women's Music Business Association.

Kim Ray is pursuing a Masters degree in Peace, Conflict, and Development Studies at the Universitat Jaume I in Castellón, Spain.

Class of 2005

Jane Charney is a campaign and marketing associate for the Jewish Federation of Greater Indianapolis. She plans on beginning graduate school in Fall 2007.

Sarah-Daisy Dygert is pursuing a Masters degree at Indiana University in Latin American and Caribbean Studies.
Katie Fates works as a purchasing agent for Gerry Brown and Associates and specializes in purchasing interiors for high-end hotel chains. Her job includes working with designers and the property, and budgetary and timing constraints.

Kelli Long is pursuing a Masters degree at George Washington University’s Elliot School of International Affairs.

Jaden McNeely lives in Lira, Uganda and is the Country Director for GRI-Uganda. GRI-Uganda is working with USAID and UNICEF, along with the Ugandan Government to implement immediate acute healthcare to about 400,000 IDPs with no access to healthcare. He has just finished a proposal that will hopefully lead to the building of a full-scale hospital in the middle of the rebel areas about 3 hours drive from the GRI-Uganda office.

Scott Shackelford completed his Masters degree in International Relations at the University of Cambridge in July and is now starting law school at Stanford University.

Kim Stoltz is starting her second year in Georgetown University's Arab Studies program in the Walsh School of Foreign Service and is a candidate for a certificate in Refugee and Humanitarian Emergencies from Georgetown's Institute for the Study of International Migration (ISIM). She also works at ISIM part time this year as a research assistant.

Meg Walsh is Executive Assistant for the Edelweiss Lodge and Resort in the Bavarian Alps. ELR is an American armed forces recreation center which, using non-appropriated funds, caters primarily to US military and their families with an emphasis on soldiers on R&R leave who are in the middle of or have just finished their one year deployment to Iraq, Afghanistan or the Balkans.

Class of 2006

Megan Alvarez is beginning law school at IU-Indianapolis where she plans on concentrating on international human rights law.

Ginger Barnes is a recruitment officer for Indiana Technical University of Fort Wayne. She plans to join the Navy in Fall 2007.

Adrienne Bock after completing a summer internship in Chicago, she works in Pittsburgh for a property management company. She plans on starting graduate school in the fall for a Master's in Education or MAT for secondary education in Spanish.

Laura Bowman (Pontius) lives in Wyoming where she hopes to join the Teton Literacy Program. The program focuses on family literacy among Latinos in the Jackson Hole region.

Bobby Bresner is Director of Marketing for VIP Tickets in Las Vegas. VIP Tickets is a high end ticket brokerage specializing in the best seats at sold out events.

Margaret Cotter is currently living in Chicago and working as a legal assistant. She plans to enter law school in the fall.

Matt Crawford works for TradingPartners in Chicago. TradingPartners does procurement solutions for companies while using eAuctions to get the best prices for the client. He is an eSorcing Manager and his job is to find suppliers who can fill the needs of the customer. The position allows travel to the company HQ in London, as well as in the Asian HQ in Shanghai. He uses his Chinese skills to find suppliers in China.

Mark Gromski is attending Harvard Medical School.

Jessica Hillsley has joined the Peace Corps and is awaiting assignment.

Deborah Kogut is currently an intern for Congressman Cardoza. She will join the Peace Corps in the Spring 2007 and assigned to West Africa.

Jeff Lightfoot is a graduate student at the George Washington University Eliot School of International Affairs. He is interning at the Scowcroft Group which advises businesses that seek to invest in politically unstable areas of the world. Kevin Malone is working for the Coalition for Peace Action, a Princeton, N.J. group that promotes global peace, an end to nuclear proliferation and the election of like minded officials, while awaiting assignment with the Peace Corps doing sustainable agriculture and community development work in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Jane Penley works for Rotary International doing public relations.

PaulScott Thacker is the Legislative and Policy Assistant for Independent Sector. In this position he conducts public policy research and generates daily news reports for Independent Sector's thousands of members and member organizations - among various other duties. Independent Sector functions as a leadership forum for nonprofits, and represents charities and philanthropic institutions across the United States.

Michele Wirth works for the international division of DHL in San Francisco.

Director’s Circle

The International Studies Program Director’s Circle includes individuals, trusts and corporations dedicated to making a difference by building leadership in the 21st Century

J. Bart and Cinda Culver
Edward Johnson
Hillary Kahn
Daniel Knudsen
Lidong Kong
Robert Mikolon (Class of 2004)
Nicholas and Suzanne Strout
Zhishuai Zhou

James Farnsworth
Robert Johnson
Swadesh Kalsi
Curtis and Joy Knudsen
Kraft Foods
Janet Smith
The Michael Brooks Charitable Trust
Christiane Gruber’s I201: Culture and the Arts class at the Tibetan Cultural Center south of Bloomington.

External Council Members Robert Johnson, Swadesh Kalsi, Janet Smith, Nicholas Strout and Steve Tuchman (left to right) participate in a job panel discussion for International Studies majors.