Greetings from Bloomington! It has been another very busy and productive year in the IU Office of Admissions. Our fall 2006 freshman class looks to be one of the largest in IU history — more than 7,000 students — and these students will be higher quality in terms of academic achievement, as well as more diverse, proving that IU is hotter than ever!

This is a very exciting time for IU and recruitment. This summer, a new vice provost for enrollment management was hired. Roger Thompson is an excellent addition to the university and brings a wealth of experience and new ideas that will move Indiana University toward its recruitment and retention goals. Vice Provost Thompson oversees the Office of Admissions, Office of Student Financial Assistance, Office of Orientation Programs, and the Office of the Registrar — all of the areas that work with students throughout their enrollment process. You can read more about vice provost Thompson on page 5.

If prospective students can’t make it to campus, we hope they will see us around the country at college fairs, high schools, and at IU Preview events. In this newsletter you will see the list of IU Preview events being held around the country this fall, and we welcome your attendance and involvement. There is also information about SAT and ACT scores, multicultural and international recruitment updates, and the IU profile for the 2005-06 school year.

Thank you for all that you do to assist Indiana University in recruiting the best and brightest class of new students each year — on to fall 2007!

Sincerely,
Sarah Thompson Booher
Associate Director of Recruitment Outreach
Coordinator, Alumni Student Recruitment

A MESSAGE FROM SARAH THOMPSON BOOHER, Coordinator of Alumni Student Recruitment

Nancy Otte, president of the Southwest Indiana Chapter of the IUAA, and Sarah Booher at the Southwest Indiana Student Send-off in July.

STAY IN TOUCH!
Keep us informed of address changes, recruitment events in your area, and new IU friends to join the student-recruiting team!

O
nce again we are at the doorstep of a new academic year. However, just for a moment we should reflect on this past year’s previews, college fairs, phone calls, and countless other programs for prospective IUB students. Why? I think we all deserve a pat on the back, a “job well done,” and a cool glass of lemonade for the role we played in bringing in one of the largest classes in history to IUB!

As is the case every summer, this summer has been quite active with existing programs and new collaborations, relationships, and implementations. Below is a brief summary of these programs as relates to multicultural outreach:

- June 12, 19, and 26 — collaborated with the Office of Community and School Partnerships to provide college preparation information to high school freshmen through a program called Pathfinders
- June 29 — established new relationship and hosted a visit day for the Upward Bound group from The College of Mount St. Joseph in Cincinnati
- July 10 — continued partnership with Indianapolis Public Schools and Perry Township schools in Indianapolis by hosting a visit day for 90 students
- July 13 — collaborated with other IU campuses to host I AM IU program; the first such collaboration in an effort to highlight the entire IU family statewide
- July 14-16 — collaborative efforts continued as IU was strongly represented at the 36th annual Indiana Black Expo Summer Celebration; several hundred boxes of red hots candy were handed out, as we continued to proclaim the ever present theme that “IU is Red Hot!”
- Aug. 5 — hosted fifth annual Twenty-First Century Scholars Day on campus. This program is funded by the state and is for first generation, low-income students from Indiana; the scholars

The successes of events like Twenty-First Century Scholars Day, I AM IU, and many others are testaments to the fact that IU is indeed Red Hot. However, make no mistake, we are hot because of our continuous drive toward academic excellence, as well as diversity. That, my fellow alumni, is what keeps the flames burning.

As a reminder, Oct. 21 is the Multicultural Open House for High School Seniors. If you know of any person who is interested in attending, please visit us online at www.indiana.edu/~iuaadmit/visit/multiculture.shtml to get an overview of the day and/or register. Once again please feel free to contact me at charsand@indiana.edu if you have any questions regarding multicultural outreach.

I have just completed my first year as assistant director in the IU Undergraduate Admissions Office, and I have loved every minute of it. As an IU alumna, I jumped at the opportunity to join the Admissions staff in Bloomington. I am originally from Long Island, N.Y., about 30 minutes from New York City. After completing my undergraduate degree in 2002, I worked in Chicago for a year before deciding to go back to graduate school. I graduated from Long Island University with a master’s degree in school counseling from the School of Education. Within a few weeks of graduation, I was on a plane back to IU to start my position at the Admissions Office.

Having studied school counseling in graduate school, I was required to complete a variety of internships at three Long Island area high schools. My experience at these three vastly different high schools laid the foundation for my decision to enter higher education in the admissions capacity. I found that my favorite part of working with the students was helping them with their college applications and their college search process. Now I have the chance to help students see what is so amazing about IU on a daily basis.

My responsibilities include traveling to and reading applications for students from West Central Indiana, portions of Indiana, as well as New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut. Because I am originally from the Northeast, I absolutely love the opportunity to share what is so wonderful about IU with east coast students.

Another program that I coordinate is the Campus Tour Guides which is a part of our Student Ambassador program. This exciting position allows me the chance to work with current IU students. This group of almost 80 tour guides is comprised of many of the best and brightest students on this campus. They are not only outgoing students with stellar public-speaking skills, they are also usually the first current IU student that our prospective students will meet. This makes their job very important, as we all know how essential a first impression can be.

During this past year, I have had the opportunity to travel and meet an extremely diverse group of students. I have met students from large cities, suburbs, and small towns all of which have one thing in common — they all want to attend IU! I am looking forward to the 2006-07 school, and I hope to meet some of you on the road this fall at the many college fairs we attend.
INTERNATIONAL RECRUITMENT AND UPDATES

Stephanie Stephenson, Assistant Director — International Admissions

Fall has arrived in Bloomington, and the IU Office of International Admissions is already planning for the freshman class of 2007–08! It has been an exciting year in International Admissions, and I would like to share with you some updates from our spring initiatives and plans for the fall recruitment season.

We could not reach all of our international students without the assistance of IU alumni. The Office of International Admissions continues to collaborate with alumni clubs around the world in our recruitment efforts. With the aid of the IU Alumni Association, we partnered with alumni chapters in 20 cities to organize Admitted Student Receptions. These receptions, hosted by the local alumni chapters, gave admitted IU students the opportunity to connect with former IU students, discover information about campus life, learn about the hundreds of opportunities available to them at IU and in Bloomington, and ultimately help them decide whether IU is the right choice. These receptions provide a great service to our international students and wouldn’t be possible without your involvement. Thank you to all of the international alumni chapters that hosted events!

IU is also traveling this fall. Candice Progler, assistant director for international recruitment, is preparing for an active fall recruitment season. Candice will be recruiting in 12 cities throughout India and Northeast Asia. In India she will have the opportunity to speak with prospective students during university fairs and school visits in seven cities around the country. After completing her tour in India, she will visit Taiwan, China, Hong Kong, South Korea, and Japan, where she will meet with students and their families at similar events. We hope that you will have the opportunity to meet Candice during her upcoming international recruitment activities!

In other exciting news, Interim Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at IUB Michael A. McRobbie has recently returned from an 11-day trip to China. McRobbie met with Tsinghua University Vice President Chen Jining to develop an agreement focusing on the collaboration between IU and TU regarding research and student-exchange programs. During McRobbie’s tour of Beijing, Shanghai, and Hangzhou, current and prospective IU students had the opportunity to meet with him and many IU alumni at dinner receptions hosted by the Alumni Association.

The recruitment season for the largest international freshman class in history has just ended, and we think that next year will be just as exciting! The Office of International Admissions thanks you for your past and future efforts. With your assistance we are better able promote Indiana University Bloomington to interested students and their families!

SAT AND ACT STANDARDIZED TESTS — THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW BEFORE THE FALL

We do require all students to submit either ACT or SAT scores as part of their application for admission to IU. As we did last year, we will require that students take the new ACT or SAT with the writing component. However, this new writing section will not enter into our decision-making on admission decisions for fall 2007. We will collect data and evaluate this part of the exam to determine if it will be valuable for us to use in the future.

For fall 2007, we will make admission decisions based on the same 36- and 1600-point scales on the ACT and SAT, respectively, as we do currently. We will also continue our practice of taking the single best ACT composite score (if the student takes the ACT more than once) and the best verbal and mathematics scores from the SAT (even from different administrations of the test) into consideration during our review process. If students have already taken an older version of the ACT or SAT, they should still submit those scores as well, as we will continue to use the highest that they have earned.

ACT and SAT scores will be a more significant part of the application review process than they have been previously. The average scores for admitted students in last year’s class were: 1160 SAT and 24 ACT. However, please share with students that, as always, the ACT or SAT score is just one of many variables that we use to make admissions decisions.
MEET THE RECRUITERS Kellye Kirkbride, Durham, N.C.

I grew up in Worthington, Ohio, a suburb of Columbus — the heart of Ohio State Buckeye Country. I don’t think my parents ever imagined that they would have a daughter that would become a Hoosier. When it was time to look for colleges, I was told that I could go anywhere, except Michigan. I had never really considered IU until after attending a college fair my junior year in high school. I remember walking up to the IU table with a friend (she was interested in the business school). We got to talking to the women working the table, and they left such a positive impression on me that when I was making my list of schools to visit and apply to, the IU brochure stuck out in my head and I thought, “why not?”

As engineers, both of my parents were a little surprised when I told them I wanted to go to a school without an engineering program. In December of my senior year of high school, my dad and I drove to Bloomington, Ind., just before Christmas. When we arrived in town, my dad called and made an appointment for us the next day at the Admissions Office. I remember having a very pleasant conversation with Mary Ellen Anderson. To this day, my dad claims that he knew right away that I would go to IU by the look on my face.

As a student at IU, I took advantage of a number of opportunities that IU had to offer. One of the best things that I did was participate in the Intensive Freshman Seminar. It really helped my transition from high school to college, along with getting used to the idea of being an out-of-state student. My senior year at IU, I was the president of the Student Athletic Board. That fall, I got my “15 minutes of fame” on ESPN when a number of student leaders were interviewed after coach Bob Knight’s firing. All my experiences, in and out of the classroom, and fond memories of my time at IU have left me with a close connection to IU.

After receiving my bachelor’s degree in biology in 2001, I decided to attend Duke University to pursue a PhD in molecular cancer biology (which I hope to have completed in the spring of 2007). My thesis research focuses on understanding the cellular mechanisms involved in cancer growth, particularly the types of signals sent to tumors and how tumor cells are able to ignore the stop-growth signals it receives.

As soon as I heard about the Alumni Student Recruiters program, I signed up, remembering fondly the impression that such individuals had made on me when I was looking at schools. I always have an adrenaline rush after a college fair and talking about all that IU has to offer. I spend a lot of time convincing potential students that Indiana is not that far away and all that it has much to offer. Often, they know about the soccer program and the music and business schools. The easiest question I get is, “do you have an engineering program?” It is painful, but I have to refer them to Purdue.

I had only been in Durham a week when a fellow Alumni Student Recruiter, Jill Miller, invited me to a Durham Bulls baseball game where I met a number of other local IU alumni. They have really been a great group of friends! For the past two years, I have served as the director of student recruitment for the Central Carolina Chapter of the IUAA. Recently, we established a scholarship fund (from which we will be awarding a scholarship for the first time next spring). This June we held our inaugural Student Send-off, an ice cream social that was a big success!

I have enjoyed sharing my love for IU with friends and family across the country! Go Hoosiers!

FALL 2006 COLLEGE FAIRS

Alumni recruiters around the country are already scheduled to attend college fairs this fall in Illinois, New Jersey, Ohio, California, Florida, Texas, Missouri, North Carolina, Hawaii, and Georgia. If you have been contacted by the recruitment coordinator in your alumni chapter area, or by Sarah Booher at the IU Office of Admissions regarding an upcoming college fair in your area, please respond as soon as possible. We would love to have an IU presence at as many places as we can this fall!
Bloomington, Ind. — On May 5, the Indiana University Board of Trustees confirmed the appointment of Roger J. Thompson to the position of vice provost for enrollment management. Thompson comes to IU from the University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa, where he has been associate vice president for enrollment management for the past three years.

In his new position, Thompson will oversee the Office of Admissions, Office of Student Financial Assistance, Office of Orientation Programs, and the Office of the Registrar. He will report to Interim Provost Michael A. McRobbie.

“I am confident that Roger will provide IU with strong leadership in these key areas of responsibility,” McRobbie said. “Roger has an extraordinary record of accomplishment in his previous positions. He comes to us well prepared for achieving our enrollment goals as they relate to the quality of incoming classes, diversity, and revenue generation.”

At Alabama, Thompson put in place new recruitment strategies that increased the size of the freshman class from 2,654 to 3,756 over three years, while at the same time increasing the diversity and the average grade point average and ACT score of entering freshmen.

Thompson holds a PhD degree in education policy and administration from the University of Southern California, a master’s degree in college student personnel administration from Central Missouri State University, and a bachelor’s degree in radio/television/film from California State University, Long Beach.

He served as university registrar at Alabama from 1998 to 2003. Before that, he was an associate and assistant registrar at the University of Southern California.

Thompson follows in the footsteps of Don Hossler, who retired as vice chancellor for enrollment services last July 1. Hossler, professor of educational leadership and policy studies, returned to his research interests in student college choice, persistence, enrollment management, and higher education finance, and also to teaching graduate classes in higher education and student affairs.

IU Registrar Roland Cote has served as interim vice chancellor while the search for Hossler’s replacement was conducted.

CURRENTLY ON CAMPUS CONTINUED: Sylvia McNair to join IU Jacobs School of Music faculty

Bloomington, Ind. — She’s been at home on the grand stages of Lincoln Center and Carnegie Hall and in more intimate settings such as the Rainbow Room and the Algonquin’s legendary Oak Room. But Sylvia McNair has always held a special place in her heart for Indiana University.

In what amounts to a homecoming of sorts, the IU alumna, two-time Grammy Award-winner, and internationally renowned soprano is returning to Bloomington to join the voice faculty at the IU Jacobs School of Music. She will begin teaching this fall.

“I left Bloomington almost a quarter of a century ago and for those 24–25 years, I’ve had my feet on the stage. I can tell you without hesitation that’s many more years than I could ever have dreamed of,” McNair said. “It just feels like it’s time to share with the younger folks some of the things I’ve experienced.

“If I’ve learned anything in my years as a professional, I’ve learned that singing from your heart and singing with joy is so important. And too often that gets lost. I certainly hope to be a voice for joy,” added McNair, a native of Mansfield, Ohio.

“Sylvia has long been thought to be Indiana’s favorite daughter, and although a Buckeye, this feels like a homecoming,” said Jacobs School of Music Dean Gwyn Richards. “To have her creative efforts directed towards the students of the IU Jacobs School is a thrill. Future generations of artists and teachers will personally look back on this moment as a pivotal one in their professional lives and will give thanks to her for calling Bloomington home.”

Mary Ann Hart, chair of the Jacobs School’s Voice Department, described McNair’s career as “reflecting so many of the things our students hope to accomplish with their singing. Sylvia started not as a singer, but as a violinist, was Robert Shaw’s soprano of choice in many oratorios, sang at the Metropolitan Opera and with important opera companies all over the world, and is now finding her greatest satisfaction in singing the American Songbook standards of Gershwin, Arlen, Berlin and so on.

“No matter what the repertoire, Sylvia has always been admired and praised for the pure beauty of her tone, but I think she would say that it is expressivity that is central to her life in music,” Hart added. “For her, the ability to express and communicate through singing transcends all genres of vocal music and traditional career paths. I know that she is excited about helping our students explore great repertoire and all the places their singing might take them.”

McNair has received honorary doctorates from Westminster College (1997) and IU (1998). She received a master’s degree in music from IU in 1983 while studying under Distinguished Professor of Voice Virginia Zeani.

She has maintained a longstanding relationship with the Jacobs School, its faculty and administration. In 2001 she was named the school’s executive adviser for outreach and, since, has lent her time and talents to fundraising and attracting outstanding faculty to her alma mater.

Since leaving Bloomington in 1982, she also has maintained close relationships with many of her soon-to-be colleagues at IU, including Emeritus Dean Charles Webb, Distinguished Professor David N. Baker, Distinguished Professor Timothy Noble and Associate Professor Marietta Simpson.

“These are people I’ve cherished for years, and now I’m going to be working with them,” McNair said, adding that she has always had tremendous respect for the school and the quality of its faculty. “I always brag about the School of Music wherever I go. It is one of the best music schools in the world. Not only did they [music faculty] let me in, they let me out ... with a degree! I’m still in shock over that.”

McNair is the latest in a number of superstar musicians who have recently joined the Jacobs School faculty, including pianists Arnaldo Cohen and Andre Watts, violinists Alexander Kerr, Jaime Laredo and Mark Kaplan, soprano Carol Vaness and mezzo-soprano Marietta Simpson.

McNair was awarded a 1993 Grammy for a recording of Handel’s Semele and a 1996 Grammy for The Echoing Air: The Music of Henry Purcell. Her career highlights include performances for Pope John Paul II at the Vatican, for Hillary Clinton, as well as a recital at the U.S. Supreme Court by special invitation from Justice Sandra Day O’Connor.

McNair joked that her career has come full circle. “I arrived [at IU] in a U-Haul van in August of 1978, and now I’m going to arrive in a U-Haul van in August of 2006,” she said. “It just feels like the maturing of a relationship that began 28 years ago, and I hope it will continue into the future.”
STUDENT SEND-OFFS!

Fantastic job to all of the chapters that have hosted student send-offs this summer for incoming students and their families! We have been told over and over by students who attend these events that they are one of their favorite things about the recruitment process and that it is a great kick-off to the start of their time at IU.

Students at the IU student send-off hosted at Zionsville Community High School in Zionsville, Ind.

Maureen Land (chapter president), Deanna Crispen, and Cathy Hightower serving as excellent alumnae hosts at the Cass County (Ind.) Chapter of the IUAA Student Send-off.

Stephanie Gray, left, assistant director of admissions, with the incoming IU freshmen at the Cass County Chapter of the IUAA Student Send-off.

2006 INDIANA UNIVERSITY PREVIEWS – SAVE THE DATES!

Our annual fall tradition of traveling to spots all over the country and doing hour-long preview presentations continues. IU Previews are one of the most popular and effective recruitment activities of the year, as students and parents enjoy hearing from an admissions professional, current students, and local alumni, while viewing scenes of campus. Alumni are an important part of these events and serve as greeters, answer questions, mingle with the students and their families, and welcome the group on behalf of their alumni club. Please join us!

Even if you have attended a Preview in the past, be sure to attend on in your area this year. IU Previews are one of the best opportunities for Alumni Student Recruitment training — attend one this fall!

The IU Previews (as of Aug. 1) are listed below. To see the most current information regarding IU Previews, as well as other recruitment events throughout the country, please visit the new section on the Office of Admissions Web site at www.indiana.edu/~iuadmit/events.

INDIANA UNIVERSITY FALL 2006 PREVIEWS

We’re happy to announce our 2006 fall IU Previews schedule. Representatives from IU Bloomington will be in the areas listed below this fall to offer information about our amazing academic, cultural, and social opportunities, to share admission requirements, and to answer questions. If we’ll be in your area, we strongly encourage you, your students, and their families to attend one of these programs. Visit www.admit.indiana.edu/events to view specific program locations and to register!

Alumni submissions for the Alumni Student Recruiters newsletter are always welcome. Please feel free to submit any pictures from recruitment events, such as college fairs, previews, or send-offs to be included in the next issue. You may also serve as a guest columnist and submit an article regarding student recruitment in your area. Please submit to Sarah Booher, Associate Director of Recruitment Outreach, Office of Admissions, 300 N. Jordan Avenue, Bloomington, IN 47405 or at iualumsr@indiana.edu.
