For Freshman and Sophomores who are planning on doing an Honor’s thesis, or thinking about graduate work as a step in their career. The course focuses on career development, and reading and writing for the sciences. Motivated and high achieving students learn from faculty guest speakers presenting their research. Class includes lab tours and demonstrations. The class counts for Hutton Honors College Credit, for the career course for Psychology majors (replaces P199), and is an intensive writing class. Registration requires consent of instructor; applications available in the Psychology advising office.