

AMERICAN POLITICS

The Department of Political Science at Indiana University, Bloomington, seeks to recruit an outstanding scholar of American Politics, to begin in the Fall of 2009. The position is open as to rank. The position is also open as to specialty and methodology, but we are keenly interested in candidates with expertise in American national politics, including the presidency, bureaucratic politics, policy processes and regimes, legislative politics, political parties, and interest groups. This recruitment is part of a long-term plan to enhance the study of American Politics and Public Policy at Indiana University.

Candidates should demonstrate broad theoretical interests, active research agendas with the promise for publication in high-quality venues, strong teaching credentials, and proficiency in appropriate research methods. In addition to maintaining an ongoing research program, the holder of the position is expected to teach courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and to participate in departmental activities.

Indiana University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and has a strong institutional commitment to the principle of diversity in all areas. We encourage applications from a broad spectrum of scholars, including women, members of racial and ethnic minorities, and disabled individuals. To ensure full consideration, applications should be submitted by October 15, 2008; however, applications will be considered until the position is filled.

Applicants at the senior level should submit a letter of application, complete curriculum vitae, and a list of at least three professional references. Applicants at the junior level should submit a letter of application, complete curriculum vitae, publications and papers, and course syllabi and evaluations, and have at least three letters of recommendation submitted. Application materials should be sent to: American Politics Search, Jeffrey C. Isaac, Department Chair, Indiana University Department of Political Science, Woodburn Hall 210, 1100 East Seventh Street, Bloomington, Indiana 47405-7110; Fax: (812) 855-2027. Please address any questions to Deb Speer at (812) 855-1209; e-mail: dspeer@indiana.edu.

COMPARATIVE POLITICS OF ADVANCED DEMOCRACIES

The Department of Political Science at Indiana University, Bloomington, intends to make a tenured or tenure-track appointment in the Comparative Politics of Advanced Democracies, with a focus on Western Europe and Europe more generally. The position is open to rank.

Candidates should demonstrate broad theoretical interests, active research agendas with the promise for publication in high-quality venues, strong teaching credentials, and proficiency in appropriate research methods. In addition to maintaining an ongoing research program, the holder of the position is expected to teach courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, and to participate in departmental activities as well as Indiana University's West European Studies Center.

Indiana University is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer and has a strong institutional commitment to the principle of diversity in all areas. We encourage applications from a broad spectrum of people including women, members of ethnic and racial minorities, and disabled individuals. To ensure full consideration, applications should be submitted by October 15, 2008; however, applications will be considered until the position is filled.

Applicants at the senior level should submit a letter of application, complete curriculum vitae, and a list of at least three professional references. Applicants at the junior level should submit a letter of application, complete curriculum vitae, publications and papers, and course syllabi and evaluations, and have at least three letters of recommendation submitted. Application materials should be sent to: Comparative Politics Search, Jeffrey C. Isaac, Department Chair, Indiana University Department of Political Science, Woodburn Hall 210, 1100 E. 7th St., Bloomington, IN 47405-7110; FAX (812) 855-2027. Please address any questions to Deb Speer at (812) 855-1209; email: dspeer@indiana.edu.