This year, the Robert A. and Sandra S. Borns Jewish Studies Program (Borns JSP) celebrates its 40th year anniversary. Indiana University (IU) was one of the first public universities to establish a Jewish Studies program, and it remains one of the leading programs in the nation.

Several of the individuals who helped establish the Program in its earliest days remain active: as director for nearly three decades, Alvin Rosenfeld defined the structure of the program and tirelessly promoted excellence in research and dedication to students. Andy Mallor, who now chairs the Jewish Studies Advisory Board, was student representative on the committee that first proposed the JS program. Both Paul Eisenberg and Jim Ackerman remain active emeritus faculty members, as does Mike Morgan, who joined the Jewish Studies (JS) faculty in its early days. Stephen Katz, who developed the program’s Modern Hebrew curriculum, continues to teach on Hebrew literature and culture. Carolyn Lipson-Walker welcomed our first JS majors and now serves as Assistant Director of the Program, and Missy Deckard, our Events Coordinator, celebrated twenty-five years with the Program last year. Others who helped establish the program remained at IU through their retirement, and have since passed on; the Program owes so much of its successes to Professors Henry Fischel and Irving Katz, who taught in the program for many years. We remember these departed leaders with scholarships established in their honor. Countless others have passed through the Sample Gates, as faculty, students, or guests, and I am confident that IU has played an important role in the intellectual life of each and every one of them. Today, the Program remains dedicated to the core mission of its founders. As Alvin wrote in a letter I found in the Jewish Studies archive dated March 27, 1971 (two days after I was born, mind you) the program continues to strive to be “bold” “audacious” and “relevant.”

Our 40th anniversary promises to be a productive one. We will be welcoming several new scholars to our faculty, some of whom are new to IU and others who have been visiting instructors—Aziza Khazzoom will be teaching courses on Israeli society, Eva Mroczek will be teaching courses on the Hebrew Bible, and Sarah Imhoff will be teaching on American Judaism and rabbinics. We look forward to receiving a new crop of bright and eager undergraduate students from across the country, and to seeing our first cohort of master’s students complete their degrees. The coming year also promises a full program of intellectually enriching activities and events. As you will see from this newsletter, we are enormously proud of the accomplishments of our students and faculty!

To mark our 40th anniversary, we are planning a gala concert and celebration, which will take place in the spring and feature a performance by the renowned pianist and Distinguished Professor of Music at IU, Menahem Pressler. The concert will also celebrate what we hope to be the completion of our current fundraising campaign on behalf of scholarships to send students to study in Israel.

As we look ahead, we will continue to strive toward fulfilling our core principles of advancing the frontiers of knowledge, promoting student achievement, and fostering communal engagement through rigorous interdisciplinary study of Jewish communities, texts, cultures, and history.

With thanks to all those who have helped the program and its students succeed,

Jeffrey Veidlinger, Director
Rosenfeld Chair in Jewish Studies and Professor of History

IU Press – Jewish Studies

Two IU Press JS books won major awards during the past year. Law and Truth in Biblical and Rabbinic Literature, by Chaya T. Halberstam, formerly assistant professor in the IU JSP and Department of Religious Studies (RS), received the prestigious Salo Baron Prize of the American Academy of Jewish Research for the best first book in JS. In this path breaking work, Halberstam engages law, narrative, and theology to explicate rabbinic legal authority and its ability to discern truth and affect justice.

Gender and Jewish History, edited by Marion A. Kaplan and Deborah Dash Moore, received a National Jewish Book Award in the best anthology category. Inspired by the pioneering work of the late Paula Hyman, one of the founders of Jewish gender studies, this volume shows gender to be an eye-opening entry into areas of Jewish history previously untouched by it.

The death last year of Paula Hyman, longtime distinguished coeditor with Deborah and Paula at the helm, the MJE series has published more than 60 important JS titles over several decades. IUP is pleased to announce that Marsha L. Rozenblit, Harvey M. Meyerhoff Professor of Jewish History at the University of Maryland, has joined Deborah Dash Moore as coeditor of the series, which continues to flourish.

Two new MJE books to be published this fall are Howard Fast: Life and Literature in the Left Lane, by Gerald Sorin, a biography of this best-selling writer and one-time communist that illuminates the connections among Fast’s Jewishness, his writings, and his left-wing politics. Anne Frank Unbound: Media, Imagination, Memory, edited by Barbara Kirshenblatt-Gimblett and Jeffrey Shandler, tracks the variety of creative responses to one of the world’s most widely read books. MJE books slated for spring 2013 publication are Becoming Soviet Jews: The Bolshevik Experiment in Minsk, by Elissa Bemporad, and The House at Ujazdowskie 16: Jewish Families in Warsaw after the Holocaust, by Karen Auerbach.

Adding to its impressive list of works in Holocaust studies, IUP, in association with the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, published Volume II of the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum Encyclopedia of Camps and Gettos, 1933-1945, on Holocaust Remembrance Day in April 2012. Volume II, edited by Martin Dean, is devoted to Ghettos in German-Occupied Eastern Europe. Covering more than 1,150 sites, this indispensable reference work offers a comprehensive account of how the Nazis conducted the Holocaust throughout the scattered towns and villages of Poland and the Soviet Union.

In spring 2013, the Press will bring out a new book by noted author Susan Zucotti, Père Marie-Benoît and Jewish Rescue: How a French Priest Together with Jewish Friends Saved Thousands during the Holocaust, the gripping story of a daring rescue network that operated in Italy and the south of France.

In contrast to the benevolent views of this French priest, Demonizing the Jews: Luther and the Protestant Church in Nazi Germany, by Christopher J. Probst, published in June 2012 in association with the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, focuses on the use of Luther’s writings by German theologians and clergy to reinforce the religious anti-Judaism and racial antisemitism present among Protestants in the 20th century.

A new IU Press series, Studies in Antisemitism, to be edited by Alvin H. Rosenfeld and launched in spring 2013, will focus on the intellectual and ideological roots of what has been called the new antisemitism. The first book in the series, to appear in spring 2013, will be Resurgent Antisemitism: Global Perspectives, edited by Alvin H. Rosenfeld. The volume, growing out of presentations by a distinguished international group of scholars at the April 2011 inaugural conference of the IU Institute for the Study of Contemporary Antisemitism, encompasses original research on the growth of anti-Jewish hostility on a global scale.

The multifaceted contributions of Elie Wiesel as writer, teacher, and thinker are examined in Elie Wiesel: Jewish, Literary, and Moral Perspectives, edited by Steven T. Katz and Alan Rosen, to be published in spring 2013. Next spring will also see publication of a Comprehensive Yiddish-English Dictionary, created by an expert team of Yiddish linguists under the general editorship of Solon Beinfeld and Harry Bochner. The dictionary includes over 37,000 entries and draws its lexical corpus from the highly acclaimed Dictionnaire Yiddish-Français by Yitskhok Niborski and Bernard Vaisbrot, published by the Bibliothèque Medem in Paris in 2002.

The Indiana Series in Sephardi and Mizrahi Studies, under editors Harvey E. Goldberg and Matthias Lehmann, will add two new titles in fall 2012. Bukharan Jews and the Dynamics of Global Judaism, by Alanna E. Cooper, chronicles the complex past of this ancient Mizrahi community, which, while intimately tied to the Central Asian landscape, has also maintained deep connections to the wider Jewish world. An Ode to Salonika: The Ladino Verses of Bouena Sarfatty, by Renée Levine Melammed, presents in Ladino and in English translation the coplas of Salonikan poet Bouena Sarfatty (1916-1997) which sketch the life and demise of this once vibrant Sephardi Jewish community.

The lives, experiences, and identities of German-Jewish men are explored in Jewish Masculinities: German Jews, Gender, and History, edited by Benjamin Maria Baader, Sharon Giller, and Paul Lerner, published in June 2012.

Many IUP JS books as well as the six JS journals that IU publishes—Aleph, History & Memory, Israel Studies, Jewish Social Studies, Nashim, and Prooftexts—are available in electronic as well as print form.

Readers seeking further information or wishing to order JS books and journals may visit IUP’s website: iupress.indiana.edu. Readers may also contact the Customer Service Department, IU Press, 601 North Morton Street, Bloomington, IN 47404, by phone (800) 842-6796 or by fax (812) 855-7931.

Robert Borns Honored by IU
2011 Keystone Award

Robert Borns, who with his wife Sandra, endowed the JSP twenty years ago in 1992, was honored by IU and the IU Foundation with the Keystone Award in October, 2011. The award recognizes the key role Bob has played in the university's philanthropic achievements. His generosity and vision have been a major factor in the JSP’s success, and has set an inspiring example for others.

In Memoriam of Outstanding Leaders

Dr. Peter H. Cahn, who died on December 18, 2011, an ophthalmologist and professor at the IU School of Medicine, was a member of the Borns JSP Advisory Board.

Marilyn K. Glick died on March 23, 2012. She and her husband Eugene supported the JSP and many other institutions in Indiana.

Frances B. Julian, who with her late husband Bill Julian, endowed the JSP's Bill and Frances Julian Program for Inter- and Intra Faith Understanding, died on April 1, 2012.

Frank H. Newman, former Executive Vice President of the Jewish Federation of Indianapolis, and a longtime member of the Borns JSP Advisory Board, died on December 10, 2011.
The Borns JSP benefits from the leadership and counsel of an excellent Executive Committee and Advisory Board and officers Andy Mallor, president, and Bobbi Kroot, vice president. These leaders, who are deeply committed to education and Jewish culture, have been essential for the Borns JSP’s success in community relations and fund raising. We welcome the newest members of the Advisory board: Robert Aronson, Jocelyn Bowie, Michael Finkelstein, Irene Jacobs, Martin Jacobs, and David Semmel.

The Advisory Board met with incoming Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences Larry Singell on October 16, 2011, and will meet next in spring 2013.

We are most grateful to our members for their time and commitment to the program and its students:
Donor Honor Roll
July 31, 2011-July 31, 2012

Behind each Borns JSP chair, scholarship, and success are generous people. Through their gifts, they have become partners who share the vision of the program.

2012 George and Monique Stolnitz Yiddish Prize

Julia Riegel

Julia Riegel, a doctoral student researching the role and place of music in Holocaust experience and memory, was awarded the 2012 George and Monique Stolnitz Yiddish Prize. In 2011, Julia was a finalist for both the Rhodes and the Marshall Scholarships and that summer was awarded a FLAS to study Yiddish at IU. She is a recipient of the Friends of the Borns Jewish Studies Program Fellowship.

The prize is an expression of Monique and the late George Stolnitz's strong commitment to the advancement of education in Yiddish language and culture.

Welcome New Graduate Students!

The Borns JSP is pleased to welcome new doctoral students: Charles Bonds (History) who will study the career and habitus of the Jewish author in the late Russian Imperial and Soviet contexts; Roy Holler (Comparative Literature) who will focus his studies on modern Hebrew literary representations of the trauma of the Holocaust, in comparison to African-American narratives of ethnic and representational trauma; Yehuda Magid (Political Science) who will examine the relationship of the U.S. and other players in the Middle East conflict, and, Sebastian Schulman (History) who will focus on Jewish cultural survival in Soviet Moldova.

New master's degree student Matthew Brittingham (Jewish Studies) has an interest in Jewish thought and culture, and, particularly, in how Jewish and Christian fundamentalist discourses interact with Hebrew texts in the modern context as well as the ethics surrounding textual interpretation. Rachel Cole (West European Studies) plans to study the re-emergence and re-defining of contemporary antisemitism.

M.A. Students

With the support of the Glazer Family Fellowship, Leah Cover completed her first year of the M.A. in JS. She continued to study Modern Hebrew in summer 2012 at the Middlebury Summer Institute Language School. She will begin work on her master's thesis this fall and complete her degree in the spring of 2013.

Isaac Finkelstein continues to study Yiddish language, literature, and culture with the support of a JSP Yiddish Graduate Fellowship. He plans to write his master's thesis on the relationship between the centuries-old Yiddish folk stories about the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel and the prevalence of certain slightly more recent cross-cultural folk beliefs surrounding the fate of the Ten Lost Tribes, in hopes of raising plenty of questions to address in a doctoral dissertation in folklore someday. He received his bachelor's degree in Writing Seminars with a minor in JS from the Johns Hopkins University.

In summer 2012, Joseph Hayden studied Hebrew at Middlebury Summer Language Institute. He is the chair of the 2013 JS Graduate Student Conference “Jews in Image and the Imagination: Jewish Body, Gender, and Sexuality in Representation” scheduled for February 7-8, 2012.

Doctoral Students Complete Ph.D.

Daniel J. Clasby defended his dissertation in spring 2012. His work explores Jewish integration and political culture in Risorgimento and Liberal Italy. He is an Assistant Professor of History at King's College in Wilkes-Barre, PA teaching courses in Mediterranean history, world history, and JS.

Ben Thorne, a 2011-2012 Harry Frank Guggenheim Dissertation Fellowship recipient, defended his dissertation, “The Anxiety of Proximity: The ‘Gypsy Question’ in Romanian Society, 1934-1944 and Beyond.” He is an Assistant Professor at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College in Tifton, Georgia.
Our Doctoral Minors

As a JS doctoral minor, Mollie Ables (Musicology) focuses her research on Jewish ethnography in the early 20th century. Her dissertation addresses sacred music in 17th century Venice.

In November 2011, Gabrielle A. Berlinger (Folklore & Ethnomusicology) concluded more than a year of fieldwork in Tel Aviv, Israel. With the support of a College of Arts and Sciences Dissertation Completion Fellowship, she is writing her dissertation (directed by Jason Baird Jackson) on the ritual beliefs and practices of a multi-ethnic Mizrahi, working-class neighborhood in southern Tel Aviv, with particular focus on the holiday of Sukkot. She lives in New York and works as a Folk Arts Associate at the Brooklyn Arts Council.

In 2011-2012, Jessica Carr (Religious Studies) completed her archival research with visits to Chicago and New York, and presented on “The Near and Distant Past: Displays of Palestine in the National Federation of Temple Sisterhood’s Jewish Art Calendars” at the Association for Jewish Studies (AJS). She served as the President of the active JS Graduate Student Association. During summer 2012, she continued writing her dissertation on “Images of Palestine in Jewish-American Public Culture,” directed by Shaul Magid. Jessica received grants-in-aid from the Borns JSP for both summer 2012 and the 2012-2013 academic year, as well as the Religious Studies (RS) Dissertation Fellowship for 2012-2013. In 2011-2012, Jessica was selected as the College of Arts and Sciences Dissertation Year Fellowship recipient.

Erin Corber (History) is researching her dissertation “B’nai Mitzvot de Feu: The Great War and the Reconstruction of Jewish Life in France, 1914-1940,” which has been supported by a fellowship from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada. In 2011-2012, she assisted with two undergraduate history courses; gave lectures on topics such as French and Polish collaboration in the Holocaust and the U.S. entry into the First World War; and instructed an intensive upper-level undergraduate course of her own design, focusing on the First World War. Erin presented a paper at the Paul Lucas History Graduate Student conference at IU: “Croire et Agir, Believe and Act: René Hirschler and the New Rabbi” and “Vereinigten Staaten von Europa” at the Freie Universität Berlin in June. This summer, she returned to Weimar for her 10th summer at Yiddish Summer Weimar.

Ramajana Hidic-Demirovic’s (History) dissertation, “Performing Tradition in Modern Times: Laura Papo Bohoreta’s Search for Sephardic Woman’s Identity in Interwar Bosnia” is a biography of a well-known Sephardic writer. Ramajana has been awarded several grants for her research and teaching, including the Congressman Frank McCloskey, IREX, ACTR, Mellon, and IU Future Faculty Teaching Fellowships. Her translation of several of Bohoreta’s articles will be published in a collection of primary sources entitled Sephardic Reader, edited by Sarah Stein and Julia Cohen, and published by Stanford University Press.

Dara Hill (Religious Studies) presented a paper “Other Others, Ecological Others, and Ethical Responsibility: Levinas and Deep Ecology” at the 2012 North American Levinas Society conference, and is currently looking forward to passing her exams in February 2013. She is the advisor for Congregation Beth Shalom’s youth group, where she also teaches the Machon (high school) class. She is a member of the board of the Jewish Theatre of Bloomington.

Mitsuko Kawabata’s (Ethnomusicology) research interest is music and the hybridized identities of Latin American Jews, particularly in Argentina. Her article, “Abraham Zvi Idelsohn’s Comparative Approach in Jewish Music: The Creation of Jewish Authenticity in Early Twentieth Century America” (originally written in Japanese) will be published in Journal of Handai Music Studies, Osaka University, this year.

Constanze Kolbe (History) completed her M.A. at the University of London (SOAS) and is currently a third year doctoral student researching the social, cultural, and economic relationships of the Jews of Corfu, Ioannina, Arta, and Prevesa in the 19th century.

Barbara Krawcowicz (Religious Studies) is writing her dissertation entitled “Covenantal Theodicy among Haredi and Modern Jewish Thinkers during and after the Holocaust” under the direction of Professor Shaul Magid. She received funding from the Sara and Albert Reuben Scholarship and the Friends of the Borns JSP Grants-in-Aid, for this academic year. Before coming to IU, Barbara completed a Ph.D. in philosophy at Warsaw University.

During the past year, Elizabeth Lambert (History) received research and writing fellowships from the German Historical Institute, Stiftung Erinnerung Verantwortung Zukunft, and Universität Leipzig to support dissertation work and conference attendance in Washington, Germany, Latvia, Lithuania, and Ukraine. Her review of Michael Meng’s Shattered Spaces: Encountering Jewish Ruins in Postwar Germany and Poland is forthcoming in the Journal of Modern Jewish Studies.

Erin Corber (History) decided to take a break and have a stroll. His walk took him to the very bottom floor of The Taylorian Library, to a dusty half-forgotten row of Yiddish books. He spent an hour there, sounding out the letters and tasting the language for a PhD. in Comparative Literature in 2010. Having now finished his course work, Avi is preparing for his examinations. He hopes to research Jacob Ashkenazi’s Yiddish translation of the Hebrew Bible, the Tsene Urene. The Yiddish bible raises questions of gender, translation, and hermeneutics.

Devi Mays (History) has spent the last year in Mexico, conducting research in several archives and writing her dissertation “Transplanting Cosmopolitans: The Migration of Sephardic Jews from the Ottoman Empire and Turkey to Mexico, 1900-1940” with help from a grant-in-aid from the Borns JSP and the Ruth Lilly Fellowship from the Department of History. She also presented a paper, “The Integration of Sephardic Jewish Immigrants in Mexico, 1905-1940” at Teopolíz Institute in Teopótlán, Mexico. Her dissertation examines the migration of several thousand Ladino-speaking Sephardim to Mexico as a lens into nation-building efforts in post-Revolutionary Mexico and the newly formed Turkish Republic, arguing that as Mexican and Turkish officials increasingly attempted to circumscribe national belonging along racial, ethnic, and religious lines, in part by regulating movement and citizenship, Sephardic immigrants utilized mobility to subvert state efforts to control them.

Anya Quilitzsch (History) is focusing her studies on modern Jewish ethnography in Ukraine. She has worked as a graduate assistant and now as project manager on the Yiddish oral interview project AHEYM for three years. Last year, she presented a paper at the JSGSA workshop on the Soviet Yiddish school system in 1920s Ukraine.

Amy Simon (History) is writing her dissertation on Yiddish Holocaust diarists’ perceptions of perpetrators in the Warsaw, Lodz, and Vilna ghettos. She is former Saul Kagan Claims Conference Fellow and Leon Milman Memorial Fellow (USHMM) working under the direction of Professor Mark Roseman. Amy presented her work last year at the 43rd Annual Conference of the AJS. She also taught a course at the University of Maryland Baltimore County entitled “Literature of the Holocaust.”

Deborah Shubowitz’s (Anthropology) dissertation focuses on how women in liberal Jewish communities interpret gendered sacred texts and apply their studies in their lives.

Margot Valles (Comparative Literature) won a 2012-2013 College of Arts and Sciences Dissertation Year Research Fellowship. She is writing her dissertation on “Knights, Giants, Quests and Jewishness? Strategies for Adapting Courtly Works for a Jewish Audience in the Medieval and Early Modern Period.”

Overseas Study in Israel Matching Campaign

The IU Foundation has announced a matching campaign to double the impact of new scholarship endowments of $25,000 or more for overseas study. The JSP hopes to take advantage of this campaign to provide scholarships for IU students to study in Israel.

Every semester, we hear from our students returning from Israel about the life-changing impact that their studies at Hebrew University in Jerusalem (HUJ) have had on their personal and professional development.

IU’s relationship with HUJ began in 1972 and has remained strong ever since. In 2008, President Michael McRobbie visited HUJ and returned committed to further expanding IU’s relationship with Israeli institutions and to encouraging further collaboration with Israel.

We have recently worked with HUJ to expand and enhance our students’ experiences: they have added study tracks, including the Jerusalem Sounds program for music students, and the Dance Jerusalem program for dance students. All of these programs have given students, who would not otherwise experience Israel, an invaluable opportunity to immerse themselves in the culture.

We urge you now to help ensure that the next generation will be able to experience Israel firsthand in a learning environment. Our gratitude to Barbara and Joe Alpert, Sandra and Bob Borns, Esther Fogle, Rosey Krakowitz, Jane and Andy Mallor, Sybil and Lou Mervis, Ilene and Jeff New, and Leona and Reuben Shevitz who have each pledged to endow Israel scholarships. If you are interested in endowing a scholarship, contact the JSP.

Reuben Gift Boosts Holocaust Study Scholarships

In fall 2011, the Estate of Sara I. Reuben made a gift of $175,000 to the Sara and Albert Reuben Scholarships in JS: Holocaust Studies, first endowed in 1999. The gift made possible by the Reubens’ son Larry, a JSP Advisory Board member and an IU alumnus and Indianapolis attorney, provides significant additional support for the annual Sara and Albert Reuben Scholarships to Support the Study of the Holocaust.

The late Sara and Albert Reuben’s lifelong commitment to Holocaust commemoration and their son Larry’s dedication to the pursuit of social justice come together in these scholarships. Through their generosity, the Reuben family has had a transformative impact on Jewish life in Indiana.

The first students to benefit from this generous gift are Barbara Krawcowicz, a Ph.D. candidate who will complete her dissertation “Covenantal Theodicy among Haredi and Modern Jewish Thinkers During and After the Holocaust,” and JS major Matthew Bikoff, a senior, who will research and write his JS honors thesis on how the Holocaust affected two Italian families. After spending the 2011-2012 year studying in Italy where he met with researchers at the Italian National Foundation for the Shoah, the Reuben Scholarship will enable Matt to return to Rome to interview two families and continue research at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum.

Since 1999, twenty-two IU graduate and undergraduate students have received Reuben scholarships. A 2010-2011 Reuben Scholarship recipient Tarlise Townsend was awarded this past year’s Provost’s Award for Undergraduate Research. She wrote, “It all started with the Reuben Scholarship!”

IU students in 2012—40 years of study at Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

2012 Piser Prize
Outstanding JS Graduate

“In Ben’s genial and friendly manner, he has pursued academic excellence and a deep commitment to the life of the mind. His choice to pursue the rabbinate and/or academia is no surprise. He combines an energetic commitment to social causes, services to his peers, and volunteer work while remaining highly competitive in his studies.”
—Professor Shaul Magid

Benjamin Gurin, who graduated with highest honors in Jewish Studies, was awarded the Leonore and Louis Piser Prize in JS. Of a graduating class of 26 students, Ben was selected by a faculty committee as the most outstanding graduating student who plans to pursue a career related to JS. Ben will be studying at Pardes Institute in Jerusalem this year, and plans to enter rabbinical school in 2014.

As a major in JS, he wrote his honors thesis “The Quest and the Jewish Jesus (1900-1965),” under the guidance of Professor Shaul Magid. Also majoring in RS, and minorinng in History and Political Science, Ben was initiated into Theta Alpha Kappa (the RS Honors Society) and graduated with an Honors Notation from the Hutton Honors College. He served as secretary and president of the JS Student Association, and on the boards of Chabad House, the RS Student Association, and the Indiana Israel Affairs Committee; he taught at Congregation Beth Shalom in Bloomington; and he participated in the Machon Kaplan Religious Action Program. Ben was a member of the College's Academic Fairness Committee. His senior year, he volunteered in the chaplaincy program at Bloomington Hospital.

The $1,000 Piser Prize is awarded annually to an outstanding graduating JS B.A., certificate, or Hebrew minor student who is planning further graduate work in JS and a career in the field. Making the award possible were the late Leonore and Louis Piser, of South Bend.

2012 Bern Essay Prize Winner
“The Aping of Iudaismos”

“The Aping of Iudaismos: A Brief History on the Relative Origins of Judaism and Christianity and Jewish Identity,” written by Samuel Ujdak, a junior from South Bend, majoring in JS and RS, was the winner of the $1,500 Henry A. Bern Memorial Essay Competition. One committee member wrote that Samuel’s lucid and highly analytic essay, written for a course on Talmud taught by Shaul Magid, “tackles one of the more consequential and complex questions in the history of ancient Judaism, namely, the so-called ‘parting of the ways’ between Judaism and Christianity.”

Samuel writes: “While Christianity may have created our modern conceptualization of ‘religion’ as an individually unique aspect of human experience, I do not believe Rabbinic Judaism, at least that of the early Christian era and Late Antiquity, to have the systemic shift into being a full-fledged religion exclusively. Rather, the nature of self-identification as a specific ethnic group that placed a substantial amount of emphasis on religious practice in ‘Ioudaismos” endured well into the composition and redaction of the Talmud, maintaining Rabbinic Judaism as a more complex cultural sphere.”

The annual Bern Essay Competition was established to honor the memory of Henry A. Bern, Professor Emeritus in the IU School of Education, loyal supporter of the Borns JSP, and a long-time Bloomington resident.
Undergraduate Honors

JS majors David Bloom, Jamie Ehrenpreis, Benjamin Gurin, Bianca Hasten, Aela Sapir, and Benjamin Westfall; JS certificate students Dana Levy, Kristin Riebsomer, and Zachary Schmucker, and Hebrew minor students Tavor Allali, Rachel Cohen, and Ally Weiss were named to the College of Arts and Sciences Dean’s List for fall 2011.

JS majors David Bloom, Rachel Crouch, Jamie Ehrenpreis, Benjamin Gurin, Aela Sapir, Julia Spiegel, Joelle Swatez, and Benjamin Westfall were named to the College of Arts & Sciences Dean’s List for spring 2012.

David Bloom and Benjamin Westfall were 2012 Founders Scholars.

Benjamin Westfall was honored as the 2011-2012 Most Outstanding NELC Undergraduate.

Benjamin Gurin won the 2012 RS Undergraduate Honors Essay with his JS honors thesis, “The Quest and the Jewish Jesus.”

The JSP is a Learning Community

“The Borns Jewish Studies Program isn’t just an excellent academic program, but a family. The professors and students alike encourage and motivate all of us to fulfill our potential and are willing to lend a loving and supporting hand in times of need.”

Aela Sapir, 2012 JS B.A. and Hebrew minor graduate

“JS faculty and staff are engaging both inside and out of class. Over the past year, I’ve been so impressed with the community we are creating here in Bloomington. I know I’ve made the right decision coming here to study.”

Joseph Hayden, JS master’s degree student

President Leslie Gubitz representing the JS Student Association.

Yiddish Club with klezmer musician Alan Bern.

The JS Graduate Student Association’s publishing workshop with Janet Rabinowitch, Director of IU Press; Professor Eric Sandweiss, Editor of Indiana Magazine of History; and the JSP’s Professor Judah Cohen. The Jewish Studies Graduate Student Association sponsored regular research workshops presented by JS graduate students, and social gatherings.

Judah M. Cohen's co-edited book, The Culture of AIDS in Africa: Hope and Healing through Music and the Arts, was published by Oxford University Press in fall 2011. His book Sounding Jewish Tradition: The Music of Central Synagogue won a 2011 Award for Excellence from the Greater Hudson Heritage Network; and in spring 2012, his book Through the Sands of Time: A History of the Jewish Community of St. Thomas, US Virgin Islands was reissued in paperback by Brandeis University Press. Cohen published the essay “Arabs and Jews in the US Virgin Islands: A Search for Caribbean Paradigms,” in Latin American and Caribbean Ethnic Studies (v. 6: 2); and his entry “Music, Popular” appeared in The Cambridge Dictionary of Judaism and Jewish Culture. He contributed book reviews to the journals: Ethnomusicology, AJS Review, PerfectBeat, and Estudios Interdisciplinarios de América Latina y el Caribe. Cohen gave the lecture “Adding the Soundtrack: Jews and Music in Late 19th Century America” at Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion in Cincinnati in February 2012, and delivered the colloquium “Zimrath Yah: A New Source for Understanding Jews and Music in Late 19th Century America” at the IU Jacobs School of Music in March 2012. In spring 2012, he became AJS Division coordinator for Jews and the Arts; he served on the program committee for the American Jewish Historical Society’s 2012 Scholars Conference; and, he helped coordinate the visit of Annie Levy and Franny Silverman as the 2012 Dorit and Gerald Paul Artists-in-Residence at IU. Cohen was also named a Harry Starr Fellow in Judaica at Harvard University for spring 2013. This year, Sarah Imhoff had the pleasure of teaching the graduate colloquium class with Born’s JSP’s inaugural group of master’s degree students. She also taught undergraduate classes: “American Jewish History,” “Jews and Race,” and “Understanding the Rabbinic Mind.” In winter 2012, she presented papers at three annual conferences: the American Academy of Religion, the AJS, and the Organization of American Historians. This summer, she lived in Israel and researched a project about gender and American Zionism.

Stephen Katz, funded by grants from the Borns JSP, the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures, and an Overseas Research Grant from the Office of the VP for International Affairs, pursued his project on the representation of the Holocaust in Hebrew literature in the years during and immediately following the Holocaust. He is currently completing an article on the fiction of Yoram Kaniuk. He published a review of a study by Professor Yair Mazor, Israéli Poetry of the Holocaust, in Shofar, 29:1 (fall 2010), and a review of the novel Life on Sandpaper by the Israeli novelist, Yoram Kaniuk, Shofar (summer 2012) (now online at www.case.edu/artsci/fdst/mjsa.html). He completed a review essay for Shofar surveying the recent increase in the study of Hebrew and Yiddish literature in America. He taught a variety of undergraduate and graduate courses, some carrying parallel Hebrew sections for those wishing and able to do the readings in the original. Among these were the newly-developed College Themester course, “Guns and Roses: Representations of Soldiers and War in Modern Hebrew Literature,” and “David: The Man and the King,” which examined representations of King David in ancient Jewish, Christian, and Islamic sources and in contemporary world literature. This fall, he is teaching a course on contemporary Israeli culture and another on Biblical themes in Modern Hebrew literature. He took part in a round table discussion of the study of American Hebrew literature, “New Work on American Hebraism and the Changing Map of Modern Jewish Literature: Responses to Alan Mintz’s Sanctuary in the Wilderness and Michael Weingrad’s American Hebrew Literature,” and delivered a paper, “Sunset in the Golden Land: American Hebrew Literature of the Holocaust Years” at AJS. Katz continues to serve on the editorial board of Ayin Gimel: The Journal for the Study of the Work of S.Y. Agnon, housed at Bar-Ilan University. He is Director of Undergraduate Studies for the Department of Near Eastern Languages and Cultures.

Dov-Ber Kerler organized and led the 2012 IU Yiddish Ethnographic expedition to central and western Ukraine and Moldova in June, 2012. The expedition was funded by a special CAHI grant and the Alice Ginott Cohn Chair in Yiddish Studies. In August, he taught two advanced Yiddish language and literature courses (in Yiddish) at the intensive Yiddish Summer Program in the Vilnius Yiddish Institute at Vilnius University in Lithuania. He gave interviews on the AHEYM project, contemporary Yiddish literature, and the Borns JSP to the Yiddish programs of Moldova state radio and the Israeli Broadcasting Corporation. Seven of his Yiddish poems in Romanian translation were included in the 2011 collection on Jewish literature and culture by the Moldovan lawyer, cultural activist, and literary polymath, Boris Druţă, that appeared in Chişinău, Moldova. Another of his poems (in Ukrainian translation) was included in the second edition of the Ukrainian anthology of Yiddish poetry that appeared last year in Kiev, Ukraine. He revised and updated the entry on Yiddish poetry for the new edition of the Princeton Encyclopedia of Poetry and Poetics. One of his graduate courses last year was dedicated to Yiddish and Jewish bibliographical, scholarly, and literary resources in the age of of Internet. A hopefully useful byproduct of that course was the new YIDDISH ONLINE RESOURCES website (still under construction) that offers links to numerous primary and secondary resources: https://sites.google.com/site/onlineyiddishresources/welcome. Also, many new educational and entertaining audio-video clips on Yiddish poetry, folklore, ethnography, and performance were added to his YouTube channel: http://www.youtube.com/user/kalabusha/featured. Earlier this year, Volume 29 of YERUSHOLAIMER ALMANAKH – Periodic Collections for Yiddish Literature, Culture and Scholarship appeared in Jerusalem under his editorship. It contains, among others, original works of Yiddish fiction, poetry, drama, memoirs, essays and studies by 44 contemporary authors and scholars from Europe, Israel, Australia, North and South America.

Nancy Levene was awarded a College of Arts and Sciences’ Trustees Teaching Award in 2012. Her article, “Does Spinoza Think the Bible is Sacred?” was published in Jewish Quarterly Review in fall 2011. She will teach a graduate course on Spinoza in spring 2013.

Jason Mokhtarian published an article in the Jewish Studies Quarterly entitled “Empire and Authority in Sasanian Babylonia: The Rabbis and King Shapur in Dialogue.” He also spent this past year finishing an article on the concept of “infidels” in Zoroastrian polemical writings against Jews, Christians, and Muslims, which will be published soon in a special edition of the journal Iranian Studies that he is co-editing on the topic of religious culture in late Sasanian and early Islamic Iran. He is completing his first monograph “Talmudic Culture in Ancient Persia: Rabbinic, Kings, and Priests in Sasanian Mesopotamia.” In this book, he analyzes the Talmud’s representations of Persians with a particular eye to the ways in which the wider Sasanian context affects the Babylonian rabbis’ concepts of authority and identity. Mokhtarian delivered a paper at the annual Society of Biblical Literature conference in a panel on religious competition in the third century C.E. This academic year, he is excited to teach a new course called “Sacred Books of the Jews,” as well as the first semester of the “Introduction to Jewish History” sequence, and the upper-level undergraduate class “Rabbinic Judaism: Literature and Beliefs.”

Tikvah Summer Program at Princeton University on “Hope and Messiahism.” He gave a talk on his recently published book, The Cambridge Introduction to Emmanuel Levinas, for the JSP at IU. During the fall semester, Morgan was a visiting professor of religion and JS at Princeton University. He participated in a discussion of his book Interim Judaism at The Jewish Theological Seminary and gave a lecture at Princeton on the concept of revelation in Fackenheim’s Jewish philosophy. His book Fackenheim’s Jewish Philosophy: An Introduction will be published by the University of Toronto Press. A paper, “Jewish Thought and Contemporary Philosophy” will appear in Jewish Philosophy: Perspectives and Retrospective, edited by Raphael Jospe and Dov Schwartz. In the spring of 2012, Morgan was the Senator Jerahmiel S. and Carole S. Grafstein Visiting Chair in the Department of Philosophy, Professor Emeritus, at the University of Toronto, and he has been invited to be the Horace W. Goldsmith Visiting Professor in Judaic Studies at Yale for the fall of 2012. His paper “Revelation in Emil Fackenheim’s Post-Holocaust Jewish Thought” will appear in a volume edited by Irene Kajon, Giacobbe e l’angelo. Figure ebraiche alle radici della modernità.

He also gave a lecture on Emmanuel Levinas at the University of Arizona. “Providence: Agencies of Redemption” appeared in The Cambridge History of Jewish Philosophy: The Modern Era, ed. Zachary Braiterman, Martin Kavka, and David Novak (Cambridge, 2012), and “Emmanuel Levinas as a Philosopher of the Ordinary” appeared in Totality and Infinity at 50, ed. Scott Davidson and Diane Perpich (Duquesne, 2012). His book on modern Jewish philosophy, co-authored with Paul Franks, and to be published by Cambridge University Press, is nearing completion, and he and Steve Weitzman are editing a collection of papers on the idea of messianism in Judaism, based on workshops conducted over the past three years at Princeton University. Most importantly, in June 2012, Grandma Audrey and Grandpa Mike joined their daughter Debbie, her husband Adam, and their twin granddaughters, Gabby and Sasha (now five and a half) on the girls’ first trip to Israel.

Eva Mroczek defended her Ph.D. at the University of Toronto on May 23rd and began as Assistant Professor in the Borns JSP and the RS Department in August. Last year, she taught “Introduction to the Old Testament/Hebrew Bible,” “Prophecy in Ancient Israel,” and “Lament and Suffering in Judaism.” She led a weekly Aramaic Reading group where JS faculty and students met to read selections from the Book of Daniel, the Elephantine papyri, and the Dead Sea Scrolls, and she taught a special reading course in Biblical Hebrew. She presented her research at the Erasure History Conference at the University of Toronto in November; and, gave two papers at the Society of Biblical Literature annual meeting. This summer, she was in Israel researching her next project, a book about the material and social history of reading in early Judaism.

Mark Roseman prepared a new foreword for the revised edition of The Wannsee Conference and the Final Solution that will appear with the Folio Society later this year. Also for Folio, he wrote the introduction to a new edition of Sebastian Haffner’s The Meaning of Hitler. With Dipresh Chakrabarty, Carol Gluck and others, he participated in a roundtable on “modernity” that appeared in the American Historical Review, contributing an essay on National Socialism. Another essay, “Bloodlines,” was published in a roundtable on Timothy Snyder’s Bloodlands, which appeared in the Journal of Genocide Research: The 70th Anniversary of the Wannsee Conference led to a number of invitations in Europe and North America. Mark participated in a commemorative event in Berlin involving the President of the Federal Republic, and the ensuing international conference organized by the House of the Wannsee Conference. He was also keynote speaker at events commemorating the conference at the Universities of Sussex (UK) and Utah. He gave the biennial Holocaust Education Foundation lecture at Northwestern University, and the annual lecture at the German Historical Institute London, co-organized by the University of Oxford and the Institute. He was also speaker at two events at the University of Oxford involving Professor Saul Friedländer. He gave papers at the Strassler Center, Clark University, and as a guest of a former graduate student at Wichita State University.

Antisemitism” and “What Is the ‘New’ Antisemitism?,” at Florida Atlantic University. In February, he spoke on “Primo Levi and the Germans: Is Forgiveness Possible after Auschwitz?” at the University of Chicago. In April, he gave the keynote address “Is There an Anti-Jewish Bias in Today’s University?” at the University of Minnesota’s conference, The Betrayal of the Humanities. In May, he presented “Holocaust Denial and Holocaust Approval: Two Sources of the ‘New’ Antisemitism” at the University of Antwerp, in Belgium. In June, he gave the keynote address at the Association of Holocaust Organizations 2012 conference in Detroit. Also in June, he gave 2 lectures about the Holocaust in Cincinnati, under the auspices of the Center for Holocaust and Humanity Education, and at Yad Vashem’s 8th annual conference on Holocaust education, in Jerusalem. He also appeared in two films: Unmasked: Judeophobia and Memory after Belsen. Rosenfeld continues to serve on the Executive Committee of the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum and is Chair of the Academic Committee of the Museum’s Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies. He is serving a second 2-year term as a member of the Claims Conference Academic Fellowships Committee for Advanced Holocaust Studies. He continues as series editor in the area of Jewish literature and culture at the IU Press and was appointed editor of IU Press’s new series, Studies in Antisemitism.

Jonathan Simons was a Henry H.H. Remak Distinguished Scholar in 2011-2012. He is on sabbatical this fall, funded by a Lady Davis fellowship, based at the HUJ Department of Communication and Cultural Studies Program, researching Israeli peace images. He will teach “Images of War and Peace in Israeli Public Culture” in spring 2013.

Jeffrey Veidlinger finished his first term as Director of the JSP and has agreed to serve a second three-year term. He completed his book manuscript, In the Shadow of the Shtetl: Small Town Jewish Life in Soviet Ukraine, scheduled to be published with IU Press in 2013. He continued as co-director with Dov-Ber Kerler of the Archives of Historical and Ethnographic Yiddish Memories, overseeing the cataloguing of the archive's collections and development of a website (www.iub.edu/~aheym). His article “From Boston to Mississippi on the Warsaw Yiddish Stage” was published in Joel Berkowitz and Barbara Henry, eds., Inventing the Modern Yiddish Stage: Essays in Drama, Performance, and Show Business (Wayne State University Press). He delivered invited lectures at Harvard University, Stanford University, Georgetown University, and Birmingham-Southern College, and delivered a paper at the Association for Jewish Studies Annual Conference in Washington, DC. He continued to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the AJS, Chair of the “Modern Jewish History in Europe, Asia, Israel and Other Communities” Division of the AJS, and a member of the Academic Advisory Council of the Center for Jewish History. At IU, he also served on the Executive Committees of the College Arts and Humanities Institute, the Russian and East European Institute, and the Polish Studies Center.

Bronislava Volková (Emerita) taught a new course on Central European Jewish writers and exile entitled “The Wandering Jew” in spring 2012.

Ayelet Weiss, Director of the Hebrew Program and Senior Lecturer, was awarded a fellowship from IU’s Institute for Digital Arts and Humanities to develop a new method to automatically analyze the language of Hebrew learners to determine their proficiency at a very precise level using a novel method based on computational linguistics technology.
