

Program for International Visiting Artists

*Henry Radford Hope School of Fine Arts: www.fa.indiana.edu
Collins Living-Learning Center: www.indiana.edu/~llc/*

The Henry Radford Hope School of Fine Arts and the Collins Living-Learning Center at Indiana University cosponsor this program to bring emerging international visiting artist/scholars to teach during the second eight week session in both the fall and spring semesters. Accepted applicants teach a course for each department focusing on contemporary and cultural criticism for Collins (course must have an international scope), and a focus on studio practice for Fine Arts (traditional and/or digital media).

In addition to this form, applicants should supply a resume and images of work through a website, CD/DVD, or slides. All materials should be sent to: Yara Clüver, Collins LLC, 541 N. Woodlawn Ave., Bloomington, IN 47406, USA

Instructor Information:

Name:

Address:

Phone:

Email:

Semester and year you are applying for:

Description of your work as an artist and scholar:

Your teaching qualifications (MFA or equivalent required):

Course Information for Collins (theory and cultural criticism):

Course title:

Course description, including major topics of discussion:

Course Information for Fine Arts (studio practice):

Course title:

Course description, including objectives and media to be utilized:

Are there any special arrangements or costs involved in presenting this course? Include media and equipment that students will need:

Upon approval you will be required to submit a detailed syllabus for each course outlining course objectives, readings, assignments/projects, methods of evaluation/grading, and attendance policy.