Dr. Khaulia Murtadha is a mother and educator. On the IUPUI campus she serves as Associate Vice Chancellor for Life Long Learning and Executive Director of the Community Learning Network. Murtadha is an Associate Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies at the Indiana University School of Education, IUPUI. She received her Ph.D. in Educational Leadership from Miami University and teaches doctoral seminars in culture and gender as well as graduate coursework in supervision and curriculum.

Some of her awards include the Center for Leadership Development Madame C. J. Walker (Outstanding Woman of the Year) Award; the National Coalition of 100 Black Women, Indianapolis Chapter-2010 Breakthrough Woman award; and the Indianapolis chapter of the National Council of Negro Women Education Award for 2011.

Dr. Murtadha has published in the Education Administration Quarterly, the Yearbook of the National Council of Professors of School Administration, in Urban Education, the Journal for Research in Mathematics Education, the International Journal of Qualitative Studies in Education, the Encyclopedia of Educational Leadership and Administration, the Bulletin of the National Association of Secondary School Principals and in other educational outlets. Her current research includes effective leadership in urban schools, full service community schools and African American women administrators in city school reform efforts.

In addition to opening three new Adult Learning Centers in public schools, the Division of Continuing Studies that Dr. Murtadha leads on the IUPUI campus has recently launched a service and research Center for Adult and Lifelong Learning.