- Peer Reviewers Needed for the Winter issue of Slovo

As part of the editorial process for the forthcoming Winter issue of Slovo – an interdisciplinary academic journal published at the Slavonic Department of UCL – we are looking for peer reviewers for some short articles. It would involve reading the article and briefly summarizing your thoughts on whether it makes a good contribution to CEE scholarship. For the current issue, the themes are:

- Early Soviet culture (specifically, filmography on Alexander Medvedkin);
- The politics surrounding the 2008 war between Russia and Georgia;
- Political institutions in Russia (specially, regional-center relations in the Yeltsin era);
- Concepts of the nation in Central Europe (specifically, in Serbian literature through David Albahari).

In order to peer review these articles, you do not need to have expertise in the specific topic – only a knowledge of the broader areas in which they are based. Becoming involved with this issue would be an excellent way of alerting to future employers of your academic credentials. Please email slovo@ssees.ucl.ac.uk for further information, and indicating which of the fields you would be interested in reviewing. We look forward to hearing from you!
