Following a series of scandalous corruption schemes, economic crisis and political inability to deal with the multi-fragmented party system, Brazil’s Congress impeached the President on a controversial trial. What now?

Is the new government coalition solid? Will the economic crisis be solved? Is there any sign of a new ethical standard in politics to eliminate the never ending corruption culture in Brazil?

We will address these issues and many others related to the current Brazilian political and socio-economic situation and future perspectives.

Following the lecture, we will have our weekly Portuguese Conversation table in the same room
