“El origenismo ante la literatura mundial”

Wednesday, February 27, 2013
4:00 p.m.
Walnut Room, IMU Tree Suites

James Buckwalter-Arias is associate professor of Spanish at Hanover College in Hanover, Indiana. His recent book Cuba and the New Origenismo has focused on the revival, in post-Soviet Cuba, of the literary group associated with the Cuban magazine of the 1940s and 50s called Orígenes: Revista de arte y literatura. His talk will discuss the possibility that this literary group might form part of the global literary imaginary that Goethe called Weltliteratur and more specifically, on the theoretical problems such an incorporation would entail.
