Why a Community Sale?

Every summer, thousands of students leave Bloomington in a hurry, often with no thought to the consequences of the items they leave behind. Not only do tens of tons of reusable items end up in the landfill, the environmental costs related to transportation of these items to Terre Haute, IN are extraordinary. Hoosier to Hoosier is an attempt to divert these reusable goods from the landfill during student move-out, while preventing additional resource consumption by selling collected items to students and community members, and raising funds for local charities and other organizations.

Although many students are thoughtful and do donate, local organizations are often overwhelmed, which is where Hoosier to Hoosier (H2H) comes in. By helping students avoid fees for goods left behind and saving landfill space, all for a good cause, the H2H initiative has attempted to fill a niche once sparse with sustainable behavior.

History of H2H

Under Steve Akers’ direction, Residential Programs and Services (RPS) had been collecting reusable items in the residence halls for local charities including Backstreet Mission, Teachers’ Warehouse, and Salvation Army, since 2002. Then, in 2009, an intern named John Patishnock with a vision of a sustainable move-out process was hired through the IU Office of Sustainability. Inspired by the Trash to Treasure Sale at his alma mater, Penn State, armed with a student-won grant, and paired with RPS’s Steve Akers and City of Bloomington’s Jacqui Bauer as mentors, the first Hoosier to Hoosier Community Sale process was begun. One notable difference of H2H from the inspiration sale, however, is the focus on all students, both on- and off-campus. After all, 75% of students at IU live off-campus. By focusing on all students, H2H aims to divert the entire waste stream associated with their move-out.

The first sale, held in August 2010, raised $10,469 in gross revenue and diverted approximately 20 tons from the landfill. Throughout the summer, over 100 volunteers helped coordinate the sale, which drew over 900 shoppers.

The second year of the community sale, held August 20, 2011, raised $17,603, diverted 27 tons from the landfill, and with the help of over 200 volunteers, attracted over 1,800 shoppers.

The third year of the community sale, held August 11, 2012, raised about $29,000 and diverted 35 tons from the landfill. About 2,500 people came to the sale and we had about 260 volunteers.

The 2013 H2H sale raised a gross $32,800, diverted about 45 tons from the landfill, and attracted over 2,500 shoppers. The donations were split amongst Indiana University, including Residential Programs and Services and the Office of Sustainability (50%), City of Bloomington’s Department of Economic and Sustainable Development (25%), and Habitat for Humanity of Monroe County (25%). There were also six partner organizations that participated in the incentive program that earned between $300 and $600 for their organization or philanthropy.
H2H is currently a partnership between Habitat for Humanity of Monroe County, City of Bloomington, IU Office of Sustainability, and IU Residential Programs and Services. Below is a graphic depicting the current partners involved in making the sale happen.

For the first three sales, Monroe County United Way also served as a partner organization and was depicted on the graphic above. Their primary role in the sale was collecting funds on sale day and holding the sale proceeds in an account from year to year. Their involvement in the program was largely a result of the fact that Hoosier to Hoosier was modeled after Penn State’s Trash to Treasure (T2T) program, where a majority of the proceeds from the sale are donated to the Centre County United Way.
This year, members of the steering committee took time to re-evaluate the way H2H proceeds were being allocated. It became clear that although United Way’s contribution was valuable, it accounted for less than 10% of the overall effort while they were receiving over 50% of the sale proceeds. After much discussion, steering committee members decided that in order to make the sale more sustainable, funds should be allocated proportionally to the amount of work each organization contributes to the overall effort. Due to this change in fund allocation structure, United Way found that it was no longer worth their while to contribute to the sale activities.

Habitat for Humanity of Monroe County stepped in as the fiscal partner for Hoosier to Hoosier in 2013. The Habitat for Humanity Restore served as the cash handlers on sale day and they will keep the Hoosier to Hoosier account. Their involvement as the fiscal partner was in addition to the support they have given in the past.

Goals

Previous sales have set both monetary revenue goals and tonnage donation goals. The goal of this year’s sale was not to collect as much as possible or even to increase our sales. This summer there were two main goals: to involve the Greek community in sale activities, and to successfully implement a new incentive based volunteer program.

There are still many parts of the Bloomington community that we have not successfully reached out to, most notably the Greek community. There are other off campus housing areas that we do not have good relationships with yet, but the Greek houses are the most like the dormitories in that residents move everything out each May. The houses often rent large trash receptacles during this time so students can easily be rid of what they cannot take with them. Because this is a large group of students, it is likely that our overall donations will increase significantly when a connection is made, even though that is not our goal.

Our second goal was to carry out a new volunteer program, which incentivizes organizations to volunteer their time and monetarily rewards organizations based on their contribution to the program. An organization could pledge between 30 and 60 hours to Hoosier to Hoosier and if approved, would find volunteers to serve those hours to earn $10 per hour for 501(c)(3) tax-exempt organizations (their own or another). This program served as another way to make H2H a true “community” sale, and made finding reliable volunteers much easier. In total, $3,500 was donated to seven organizations after the sale for their support.

2013 Committees

The Hoosier to Hoosier Community Sale is organized and carried out by an enormous number of volunteers. A few of these volunteers serve on one of two committees—The Education & Outreach Committee and Logistics Committee, led by Jacqui Bauer and Steve Akers, respectively. These committees meet approximately triweekly (or as needed), and are indirectly guided throughout the process by the Steering Committee, comprised of representatives from IU Office of Sustainability, IU RPS, City of Bloomington, and Habitat for Humanity.

Steering Committee

The Steering Committee met about once a month and dealt with general sale guidance.

Subcommittee heads reported to all members about topics ranging from sale goals, organizational structure, budgetary items, etc. This year’s steering committee included:

- Skyler Roeshot, IUOS Academic Year Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Sarah Hanauer, IUOS Summer Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Jacqui Bauer, Outreach Committee Chair & City of Bloomington Sustainability Coordinator
- Steve Akers, Logistics Committee Chair & IU RPS Associate Director of Environmental Operations
- Bill Brown, Director of Sustainability for Indiana University
- Emilie Rex, Assistant Director of Sustainability for Indiana University
- Carmela Garcia, Habitat for Humanity ReStore Manager
- Christine Caturano, Habitat for Humanity ReStore Manager

Logistics Committee

The Logistics Committee, led by Steve Akers, met about every three weeks over the summer to prepare for sale day. This subcommittee discusses and decides upon topics including residence hall, Greek, and off-campus collections; sale venue; trailer and truck reservations; pre-sorting; supplies; bedbug inspection; sale mapping; pricing; and post-sale pickup. Members include:

- Steve Akers, Logistics Committee Chair & IU RPS Associate Director of Environmental Operations
- Skyler Roeshot, IUOS Academic Year Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Sarah Hanauer, IUOS Summer Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Erica Bramlet, Previous IUOS Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Bettina Kehoe, Community Member
- Carmela Garcia, Habitat for Humanity ReStore Manager
- Christine Caturano, Habitat for Humanity ReStore Manager
- Stephanie Ritrievi, IU Adviser & Community Member
Education & Outreach Committee

The Education & Outreach Committee, led by Jacqui Bauer, met approximately every three weeks and handles topics such as publicity language, and the overall publicity plans for donation, volunteer recruitment, and sale day. The media involved included the H2H website, posters, local media, social media, and more. Members included:

- Jacqui Bauer, Outreach Committee Chair & City of Bloomington Sustainability Coordinator
- Skyler Roeshot, IUOS Academic Year Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Sarah Hanauer, IUOS Summer Intern & Sale Coordinator
- Jenny Gibson, Bloomington Animal Shelter & Community Member
- Allan Tharp, IU Student
- Bettina Kehoe, Community Member
- Emilie Rex, Assistant Director of Sustainability for Indiana University
- Emily Song, IU SPEA Graduate Student
- Elizabeth Izzo, Community Member
- Rohit Nagpal, IU Kelley School of Business Graduate Student
- Margie Hershey, IU Faculty & Community Member
- Sandy Merritt, Community Member

Process Details

Collection

Collection efforts began on campus this year on April 20th in the residence halls, which was followed with pre-sorting by volunteers. Donation locations were located in floor lounges and/or center buildings. We made an effort to recruit the Greek community to participate in the donation effort through a new organization called UNIFY. UNIFY was unable to give us assistance with this in the end, but next year we will have sustainability chairs within the houses that we can reach out to.
Collection continued through the summer on designated pick up days. People could request a pick up through the google form which was posted on social media and our website, or by emailing h2h@indiana.edu. We had a couple of people who dropped off donations in August when we did not have a truck available to go to them.

Sorting & Storage

Pre-sorting started in the residence halls on May 2. Volunteers met and sorted the items within the collection areas. Starting Saturday, May 4, we began moving the donations to storage trailers that we rented from Clemens Storage. This year the trailers were also stored in the yard at Clemens, as it was right next door to the sale space and would be more secure than parking them on site or across the street at Cook Pharmica as initially discussed. Six trailers were rented, though we would have needed a couple more if we had not been able to start storing things inside The Warehouse earlier than expected.

The peak volunteer period ran from May 2 to May 11 and volunteers came each day to sort items that were being brought from the residence halls. Volunteers also went along to help load the truck. We used the Jeanne Walters Real Estate truck to move donations.

Volunteers from IFC came five times to help sort donations further throughout the summer. These five groups were a huge asset and we would not have gotten as far with sorting and sale set up without them.
Sale Day & Set-up

The sale was held at The Warehouse on 1525 S. Rogers Street, on August 24, 2013. Setup for the sale officially began on August 1, though we were actually able to start storing items there and setting up a couple tables on July 13. We were lucky to have the space that early.

We were able to empty one trailer with IFC volunteers on July 27, and then had a day dedicated to doing so on August 5. We were unable to finish completely on that day and still had two to empty the rest of that week. ReStore staff were there to help with a forklift that could be driven onto the trucks via the raised loading dock, and we had a pallet jack that proved invaluable.

This year, we asked committee members to supervise shifts throughout sale setup in order to make the time commitment more manageable for the mentors and intern. This worked well, but could be improved next year, as the intern was still present almost every change she could be and the supervisors were often not confident about what tasks were a priority.

The ReStore gathered volunteers from Bloomington South High School’s Habitat for Humanity Club to be the cashiers at the sale. There were six cashiers at the main exit, two of them at the express lane, which was also new this year. In the furniture area, there were two cashiers at the main checkout and four roving cashiers that had balloons tied to them so they could be easily located.
This year’s sale was a huge success, especially when considering that it was held at a new location that was not well known. Over 300 volunteers donated 1,224 hours of their time this summer helping out with the sale. Further, not only did people show up earlier than last year, but there were more attendees as well. Over 700 shoppers paid the early bird fee to enter before 9:30 AM. Approximately 3,036 transactions were made, raising $32,800. Forty-five tons of reusable goods were diverted from the landfill, which broke last year’s record. Of this, about 12 tons (two full trailers) were left over and sent to Goodwill Industries International, Inc. (26% of the total). About 100 pounds of bedding was sent to the Monroe County Animal Shelter, 200 pounds of winter coats were sent to Martha’s House, and 100 pounds of bedding were donated to Wildcare, Inc. In addition, approximately one ton of E-waste donated to the H2H sale was safely recycled by Steve Akers.
Recommendations

This year we did not have to try too hard to get the word out about our pickup days. In the past, ongoing publicity has been crucial to getting donations, but we found that we often could not fit in all the requests, even when only publicizing on social media. It seems that word is spreading about Hoosier to Hoosier, and next year it may be even more difficult to get to all the donations and even to fit them into the sale space. Better attention should be paid to what type of donations H2H accepts. Very low quality items should be denied, such as furniture that is already falling apart. Care should also be taken only to accept donations from Indiana University students. One of H2H’s big goals in the past has been to reach the Greek community and off campus apartments, and it will be impossible to properly address these groups if distracted by residential requests. Often Bloomington residents are cleaning out their garages of undesirable items anyway, and our goal is to reduce IU’s waste.

Extending the sale’s hours should be considered. This year the starting time was pushed back half an hour, and opening of the doors was even delayed an extra half hour but the end of the sale was still the same. If we cannot consider holding the sale for more than one day, we should think about at least extending it by an hour or two to give people longer to browse through the stacks of smaller items, or consider a new type of promotion used to get rid of stock.

Finally, the growing popularity of the Hoosier to Hoosier sale is only going to increase the workload on the organizers, and it is already a great deal of work for those that already have full time jobs. It may be worth considering a second intern, perhaps one that is hired through the City of Bloomington, to help shoulder the responsibility.

More pickup days are likely to be required next year, and often there are not enough volunteers to help drive the truck and move heavy items, and having another intern whose job is dedicated to the sale could help manage the growing amount of donations.
On this note, another moving truck may be necessary in order to meet demand for pickups.

Conclusion

The Hoosier to Hoosier Community Sale has become a part of community culture. There are already people asking about what will be available at next year’s sale. It is an important resource for IU students who need a cheap alternative to purchasing items at Target or who want to donate their items but need a convenient means to do so. It has also become important within the Bloomington community as a place to find used items and also for organizations to earn money. This sale is important and should be continued for the indefinite future.

The popularity of the sale also means that the work required to manage it is going to increase. The Hoosier to Hoosier Sale Coordinator must find a way to educate IU students about the impacts of their purchasing decisions and alternatives to throwing their items away. They may also need to come up with a plan to distribute some of the excess donations to organizations, because the sale already outgrew the Gladstein Fieldhouse and isn’t far from being too big for the new location.

C: VOLUNTEER DESCRIPTIONS

May
Residence Hall Sorting Volunteer Days
Volunteers will be assigned to one or more of the twelve residence centers and join a group volunteer activity to sort and prepare donated items. The activity will be to sort clothing by type (men’s pants, women’s tops, shoes, etc.) and bag all of it for transport to the sale storage location. Additionally, items will require cleaning like microwaves, small refrigerators, etc. In sum, this is a sorting and cleaning activity to prepare items for storage and eventual unpacking and display for the 8/24/13 sale date. You do not need to bring anything other than a snack to eat. Each site will provide cleaning items, gloves, and anything else necessary to accomplish this important activity. H2H will contact you and tell you where to report for your volunteer sorting activity.

May
Pick-up & Sorting Volunteer Days
Volunteers will be assigned to either transportation or storage. Transportation volunteers will work with a small group picking up donated items with the H2H trucks from residence halls and Greek houses and then transporting to the sale storage location. The storage volunteers will be working at the storage trailers receiving the items from the transportation volunteers and sorting/organizing all items for storage. Volunteers ought to dress for active work and potentially warm weather. We will supply gloves, drinking water, and lots of appreciation. An important note: These activities will require some heavy lifting. While we will work as a team, this work is somewhat physically demanding. H2H will contact you and tell you where to report for your volunteer sorting activity.

August
Sale Set-Up
Get a sneak peek at sale goods! Volunteers will be helping to unload the storage trailers full of donations into The Warehouse to prepare for the sale on August 24. Activities will also include cleaning, organizing, and heavy lifting for those who are able. Volunteers should dress for active work and warm weather. Several shifts are available each day.

August 24: Hoosier to Hoosier Community Sale (Volunteer or just attend!)
We need YOU! Volunteers will be assigned to a variety of sale day activities. You may be an information person, a roving helper/carryer, a roving tally person, a tally table person, an area helper in household, furniture, clothing, etc. Working the sale is a fun and active experience where you are a Hoosier helping other Hoosiers. Answering questions, identifying item cost, keeping items tidy and organized – we need YOU. And you will have an opportunity to shop the sale too! Come, experience, and be a part of Bloomington’s largest Community Sale!

Volunteers play a vital role in making the Hoosier to Hoosier Community Sale happen, from collecting and sorting donations, to publicizing the sale, to hosting the sale itself. No experience necessary. Without volunteers, there would be no H2H. Thank you for considering being a part of this important event!
