In February 1962, three years into Fidel Castro’s rule of their Cuban homeland, the González family—an auto mechanic, his wife, and two young children—landed in Miami as refugees with a few personal possessions and two bottles of Cuban rum. Gerardo’s journey came full circle when he returned to Cuba for the first time fifty years after he left. In this presentation, he will discuss his impressions, emotions and conversations he had with Cuban people during his first and several subsequent visits to the island.

Biography: Gerardo M. González, PhD, is Dean Emeritus of the Indiana University School of Education and Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies. González has long been a noted and fearless education activist. On his retirement from the deanship in July 2015, he was recognized as one of the thirty most influential deans of education in the United States. In addition to his current professorial role, he serves as special advisor to the IU Office of International Programs on Cuba initiatives. In August 2018, IU Press released his memoir—A Cuban Refugee’s Journey to the American Dream: The Power of Education.

In February 1962, three years into Fidel Castro’s rule of their Cuban homeland, the González family—an auto mechanic, his wife, and two young children—landed in Miami as refugees with a few personal possessions and two bottles of Cuban rum. Gerardo’s journey came full circle when he returned to Cuba for the first time fifty years after he left. In this presentation, he will discuss his impressions, emotions and conversations he had with Cuban people during his first and several subsequent visits to the island.

Biography: Gerardo M. González, PhD, is Dean Emeritus of the Indiana University School of Education and Professor of Educational Leadership and Policy Studies. González has long been a noted and fearless education activist. On his retirement from the deanship in July 2015, he was recognized as one of the thirty most influential deans of education in the United States. In addition to his current professorial role, he serves as special advisor to the IU Office of International Programs on Cuba initiatives. In August 2018, IU Press released his memoir—A Cuban Refugee’s Journey to the American Dream: The Power of Education.