Indiana University is home to numerous frightening and bizarre tales—from a mysterious Lady in Black known to stalk students on their way home from class to the ghosts of mutilated murder victims, absent-minded professors, and students who tragically took their own lives. Folklorist Shannon Larson will provide a narrative tour of some of IU’s most unnerving supernatural legends, which reveal much about the university’s rich history, the dynamics of campus culture, and the many fears and anxieties associated with academic life.

Shannon K. Larson is a Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Folklore & Ethnomusicology minoring in English Literature. She holds an M.A. in Folklore Studies and an M.L.S., both from Indiana University, as well as a B.A. in English Literature and Creative Writing from the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana. Her research interests include narrative folklore, supernatural traditions and beliefs, dark tourism, and space and place.

Main dish will be provided.
Bring a side dish to share: veggies, salad or dessert.
$15 for members, $17 for non-members
Halloween costumes optional but highly recommended!

The program will end around 6:45 so those of you who have tickets for the Dennis James performance at the IU Auditorium can walk over on time for the show.

Please make checks payable to the University Club and mail to IMU #150, 900 E. 7th Street, Bloomington, IN 47405, or call 812-855-1325 to pay by credit card.
Deadline for reservations and pre-payment is Friday, October 19
PRINT your name as you would like it to appear on your name tag.

NAME: ________________________________
NAME: ________________________________