Power, Networks and Violent Conflict in Central Asia
A Comparison of Tajikistan and Uzbekistan

Idil Tunçer-Kılavuz, Istanbul Medeniyet University, Turkey

When the Central Asian republics gained independence from the USSR, Tajikistan suffered a civil war. The factors that the literature on civil wars cites as the causes of this were also present in Uzbekistan – but this country had a peaceful transition. Examining this empirical puzzle by isolating the crucial factors that caused war to break out in Tajikistan but not Uzbekistan, this book applies a comparative approach to the broader question of why civil wars occur and challenges many common explanations. This includes highlighting the importance of elites’ power perceptions, which have their origins in the interaction of structural-, process-, and network-related variables.

20% Discount Available - enter the code FLR40 at checkout*

*Offer cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer or discount and only applies to books purchased directly via our website.

For more details, or to request a copy for review, please contact: Jasmin Anglesea Marketing Assistant 020 755 19227 routledgeasianstudies@informa.com

For more information visit: www.routledge.com/9780415742412