The Kinsey Institute Collection
Established in 1947, The Kinsey Institute now holds one of the world’s largest and most renowned collections of historical and contemporary erotic art, artifacts and photography. The more than 100,000 items span 5000 years of history, and range from ancient Egyptian artifacts to contemporary erotic photography. Because The Kinsey Institute does not have funds for new acquisitions, the collection is dependent upon donations to continue its growth. The Institute encourages participants to consider adding their works to this historic collection. Please contact the Institute’s Curator of Art, Artifacts and Photographs, at catjohns@indiana.edu or 812-855-7686 for information about the collections or to inquire about donations.
